A minor triumph

In a story carried in the Pine Cone two weeks ago, Representative Burt Talcott released information that a complete reevaluation of the post office relocation issue had been ordered by high ranking postal officials.

Special attention is to be paid to establishing two postal sites, one of which would carry the burden of increasing population outside Carmel's city limits. The reevaluation, Talcott indicated, will take several months.

While there is no guarantee that this reevaluation will result in a decision more to the liking of Carmelites, we applaud it as a minor, but nonetheless stirring, triumph of public opinion. Representative Talcott deserves praise for his intercession in the matter. However productive this reevaluation becomes, Talcott's action in prompting it is certainly worthy of note.

Carmelites should also be appreciative of Councilman Mike Brown's continued efforts in the Post Office matter. Brown has been involved in this issue for months, talking to postal authorities, landlords and persuading Talcott to intercede.

Six months ago the issue seemed nearly resolved. Carmelites were presented with two choices, neither of which seemed particularly appropriate. The first involved building a large three-level structure at Sunset Center and the second meant moving postal facilities outside of Carmel and restructuring the traditional postal box system of mail delivery.

The matter of relocation had been dealt with for four years, since a use permit for the Sunset Center site was issued to the postal service in the latter part of 1970. Postal officials maintained then, and still do, that the most efficient and economically feasible operation would mean a new postal building at Sunset Center. The possibility of expanding present facilities had been dismissed and the only site in Carmel for relocation was determined to be Sunset Center. Moving outside the city limits was and probably still will be seriously considered, but operating two separate facilities (one inside Carmel and one outside Carmel) was not considered to be a viable option due to the economics involved.

The cost of operating two separate facilities is undoubtedly higher than operating one site. But, the only reason for relocation of the Post Office is the burgeoning population outside the city of Carmel. The question becomes, how much Carmelites will be asked to sacrifice in order to keep up with development not under their direct control. While not the fault of city residents, Carmelites are being asked to bear the brunt of the effects of rapid development elsewhere.

Carmel has maintained a unique status as almost everyone's favorite village. Population of the city itself has not changed dramatically over the years. One of the unique and delightfully pleasant aspects of life in Carmel has always been the method of mail delivery.

Carmel's system of postal boxes has enforced continuous contact between residents. Trekking to the Post Office for one's mail is not drudgery, but part and parcel of our lifestyle.

Change, in and of itself, is not harmful. But, where change drastically affects the lives of Carmelites and where change is likely to alter the character of the village, it becomes an ogre to be fought at all costs.

We feel that some form of split operation of postal sites is the best alternative for Carmelites. The population outside Carmel will no doubt continue to grow and warrant support of a separate postal facility. The people of Carmel should continue to be served in the traditional manner by the postal service, anything other than that would be unwelcome.

Coastal plan

When Proposition 20 was passed and established coastal commissions throughout the state, a majority of Californians had expressed their dismay over the status of our coastline.

It was obvious then, that some form of control over coastline areas, beyond local government, was necessary for preservation of our cherished natural resource. Local control demonstrated its inadequacies by creating a mish-mash up and down the coast.

The coastal master plan submitted for public scrutiny last week at Sunset Center is an exhaustive document.

Many objections were raised by concerned citizens. Some of these objections were certainly valid and we are confident will be reexamined and worked out.

The scope of regional or statewide power over the coastline and the method of implementation will undoubtedly be vigorously debated in the legislature. The demonstrated need for the concept itself remains.

Status of the world

Dear Editor:

Is it not obvious that the world still lacks an effective police force to stop an aggressor nation from taking to the sword? Thus, would it not be sheer folly for any land not to arm itself for defense?

Did not individuals have to carry a gun in the old "Wild West Days?" Then, too, no machinery existed for maintaining "law and order" - or was ineffective. (Our nation seems to be fast heading in that direction - unless we stop being so permissive and re-vamp our system of justice to bear down heavily on the two-legged beasts of prey in our midst!)

Each country strains to be military strong. Some lands outdo themselves and have the resources to gain enormous strength of arms. They surpass in force some or most or all others. Sooner or later such mighty lands come up with leaders in whom the brute takes over. Power goes to their heads! In the name of defense, they send their country's armed forces roaming in other lands, however distant, however weak. Sometimes in the name of "Religion." Sometimes in the name of an "Ideology." Anything that sounds good is O.K.; the idea is to use some tantalizing bait to feed the gullible.

Does not history record again and again that the most powerful lands are the aggressors, over neighbors or distant lands? Do not their leaders dream of the many pages of history their military exploits will fill up? Are they not aware that they, most often, stay far away from the front bloody lines of battle?

Does not history also make plain, what eventually occurs? Their troops are sooner or later defeated? Much of their youth are killed off or bear the scars of war? Enormous debt plagues the nation. Inflation grows ever more menacing. Cynicism and greed and corruption and dissipation and every foulness take over. Crime is ever more rampant, and permissive attitudes toward it prevail. A people becomes utterly demoralized, confused, loses faith in everything. And world hatred towards such a land grows by leaps and bounds.

History shows that nations of might go through such a shattering experience, in every age. Why? Is it because man is not yet sufficiently civilized - no rational wise enough, kindly enough, truthful enough, honest enough to learn from past experience and act nobler? Is that why, from the dawn of recorded history, enough stronger nations have suffered such similar folly?

Is man still a half-civilized creature? Are the leaders of mighty nations - including our own, the mightiest ever to come into being since nations were formed - any more bright than past leaders? What does the daily news indicate? What is the status of the world?

Carmel Bay decision postponed to June 19

By TOM LUECK

The decision as to whether Carmel Bay will be designated an Area of Special Biological Significance has been postponed until June 19 by the state Water Resources Control Board.

At a public hearing in Monterey last Friday, Mrs. Jean Auer, a member of the state board, indicated that comments from concerned an ASBS, she said.

With regard to the consequences of the state designation on the operation of the Carmel Sanitary District, which has for two years discharged its secondary effluent into the bay from an ocean outfall, she stated "we have never said 'you can't use your outfall tomorrow.' We are saying phase out."

Jim Berry, a marine

Sanitary District's ocean outfall, "has not caused catastrophic change, but what we can't come to grips with is the long term change," he said.

Through a three-year study of the effects of DDT emanating from the Salinas River, it had been found "virtually impossible to predict" where pollutants would concentrate in a body of sea water, he reported.

cessive recreational use."

He expressed support for immediate designation of the bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance with a provision for continued use of the outfall until land renovation, the alternative for effluent treatment which has been given the most consideration by the sanitary district, can be developed.

Lee Otter, a staff planner for the Central Regional Commission of the California Coastal Commission, read a resolution of the commission supporting that ASBS designation. In an inventory of marine resources the commission had found that the bay contains unique factors which include "unrivaled clear water," a "biological crossroads of northern and southern species," and the Pescadero Pinnacles and the marine canyon, he reported.

Otter explained that the commission would not object to continued discharge from the ocean outfall under emergency conditions.

Conflicting testimony came from members of the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors.

President Herman Schull indicated that the board has taken a neutral position on the desirability of the designation, but that if the state board intends to approve it the decision should be made quickly so that the district can proceed with acquisition of the eastern 137 acres of the Odello ranch for development of land renovation.

Board Member Ted Weller, however, expressed opposition to the ASBS designation. "It appears unnecessary to remove it (the outfall) at this time," he said, noting that monitoring of bay water has shown "no detrimental effect."

"If the board does declare an ASBS, is it ready to go all the way and prohibit all activity?" he questioned, referring to the city of Carmel's storm drainage system.

"No one should get the impression that the board as a whole is against the ASBS designation," remarked sanitary district member Earl Moser, in a statement prompted by Weller's testimony. "The board was unable to agree whether to support or oppose."

"I am personally for the ASBS," Moser said.

Unqualified opposition to the proposed restrictive measure came from Carmel resident Dan Daly, who commented on the expense of developing alternative methods of wastewater treatment to taxpayers.

"The taxpayer's point of view has to be listened to," he said.

The ASBS would be "no good at all," he stated. "The Carmel Sanitary District is not polluting the bay, . . . There is no such thing as pure water except in the laboratory. There is nothing special about the Carmel Bay that sets it apart from the rest of the coast," he said.

citizens in the Carmel area will be accepted until May 19.

Mrs. Auer chaired the meeting along with representatives of the regional Water Resources Control Board in San Luis Obispo. Roughly 50 people were present; representatives of the scientific community, officials of the Carmel and Pebble Beach Sanitary Districts, spokesmen for Peninsula conservation groups, and apprehensive taxpayers.

The bulk of testimony before the state panel was in support of the proposed restrictive designation, and several questions were answered about the effects of an Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS).

Mrs. Auer explained that the proposed designation is a "completely different issue" from various other state proposals to designate the bay as an "Underwater Park" or an "Ecological Reserve." The former, which would be imposed by the state Water Resources Control Board, would be intended solely to prohibit point discharge of wastewater into the bay. The others are being considered by the Department of Parks and Recreation and would affect recreational use of the bay, she said.

In fact, Mrs. Auer indicated, the designations would be compatible. The bay could be made an Underwater Park as well and biologist for the Department of Parks and Recreation, voiced support for the ASBS designation. After diving in the area of the Carmel Sanitary District ocean outfall, which is located 675 feet off shore from the Carmel River beach, he reported finding the water "an orange and brown color" near the diffuser apparatus. Even under ideal conditions, the secondary effluent discharged through the outfall would bring "certain chemicals into the food chain of the sea otters," he contended.

Noting Senate Resolution 24, sponsored by Senator Donald Grunsky, which would make the bay an "ecological reserve," Berry stated that his department "currently hopes to establish an underwater park in the area of the ASBS and a reserve in areas of the bay not covered."

When questioned by Mrs. Auer if recreational use encouraged through the designations would cause damage to beaches and underwater areas, he testified that the waters off Point Lobos are now a state reserve and "no deleterious effects" have resulted from recreational diving in Whalers Cove and Bluefish Cove.

The most persuasive testimony in favor of the ASBS came from Dr. John Phillips of the Hopkins Marine Station at Moss Landing. The Carmel Producing diagrams which showed concentrations of pollutants dispersed throughout Monterey Bay, he said it would be a "prudent" decision to prohibit use of the wastewater outfall in the Carmel Bay.

Monterey attorney Tom Hudson, who has argued in public meetings for two years that an alternative to the sanitary district's ocean outfall should be developed pointed out that correspondence from Department of Parks and Recreation Director William Penn Mott in 1971 had described development of the outfall as a "short term solution . . . with the long term solution being complete elimination of discharge."

Addressing board member Auer, he exclaimed "I want to thank you for helping me to bring them (the Carmel Sanitary District) kicking and screaming into the twentieth century."

Further support for the ASBS came from Dr. Betty Davis of the Hastings Reservation in the Carmel Valley, Jud Vanderveer of the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, Charlotte Clark of Carmel, and Gary Tate, general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Parks District.

Dr. Francis Herrick, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, told the panel of water resources officials "the real threat to the bay comes from ex-representatives of more than 15 local organizations gathered in city hall chambers last Wednesday afternoon to suggest and discuss possible events for next year to celebrate the country's bicentennial. The meeting was called by the Carmel Planning Commission.

"My own feeling is that it is a very significant event in the history of our country," commented commission chairman Robert Evans before inviting others present to express their views.

"Apparently the City Council is not going to sponsor any formal celebration of the bicentennial, and we have thought the best approach would be to draw upon the strengths of established organizations in the community," he explained.

Proposals presented at the meeting have been compiled by a special committee of the Carmel Cultural Commission. With Jean White acting as chairperson of the group, it will coordinate planning activities for local bicentennial activities.

Mrs. White told the group that several suggestions had already been voiced by members of the cultural commission and others in the community. While many of those present indicated that their organizations were contemplating commemorative patriotic events, she stated "we feel that it would be better to do one thing well than have several events."

Among the suggestions voiced so far, she said, have been:

-A permanent addition to Sunset Center, possibly in the form of a monument on the patio in back of the Friends of Photography.

-Development of the city-owned Flanders estate into a municipal park, possibly with the title of "Founders Park."

-An exhibit of children's art in the Evans Gallery at Sunset Center.

-A pop symphony taking on a patriotic theme.

-A parade.

-Establishment of bike trails.

-A fire works display.

The ideas presented by Mrs. White were supplemented by a wide variety of suggestions from the audience. Representatives were invited to the meeting from 22 local organizations, and most of those present said their groups would organize some sort of appropriate activity.

A representative of the Monterey County Symphony indicated that her group was considering an emphasis on American music, marches, and musicals in the regular concert series for 1976.

The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society may plan a program of negro spirituals for its annual Christmas Concert at the Carmel Mission Basilica next year, a representative of that group said.

"We could have a more authentic celebration of our Spanish heritage than anywhere else in California. It would require the tremendous knowledge of Mr. Downie," commented Commissioner David Hughes.

Downie told the group that the mission will undertake a ceremony commemorating the Juan Bautista expedition.

the assembled chorus. "America is not only economically depressed but spiritually depressed."

Several suggestions were voiced regarding theatrical productions with patriotic themes. A representative of the Forest Theatre Guild said his group may devote the month of July in 1976 to American plays appropriate for the bicentennial and reschedule the annual Shakespearean festival to August.

Jeff Hudelson, of the Children's Experimental Theatre, indicated that his group will produce a play with a patriotic theme, possibly one written by Marcia Hovick, head of the children's theatre group.

The Community Theatre will also plan an appropriate production, its representative said. He indicated that the musical "1776" may be chosen by his group.

"We should not only be concerned with what happened in Philadelphia in 1776, but what happened in this area," said Evans. Accordingly, Harry Downie of the Carmel Mission Basilica was the center of attention for a portion of the meeting.

"We could have a more authentic celebration of our Spanish heritage than anywhere else in California. It would require the tremendous knowledge of Mr. Downie," commented Commissioner David Hughes.

Downie told the group that the mission will undertake a ceremony commemorating the Juan Bautista expedition.

Testament for tomorrow

By GUNNAR NORBERG
Carmel City Councilman

One of the dozens of speakers who represented what I have described as the despoilers of the California coast, said at last week's Sunset Center hearing on the Preliminary Coastal Plan that he wanted to leave all future land-use decisions in coastal areas to "the lowest level of government."

And just what did he mean by that? Was he trying to run down the city and county governments to which he was obviously referring when he called them "the lowest level of government"? Or had he simply used, from his own point of view, an unfortunate choice of words?

As he was speaking, he was quite clearly saying that he believed local government -- city and county government -- was the kind of government which should make all land-use decisions along the California coast. While he spoke -- and as I thought of the many times that Monterey County government had approved land rezoning to allow wholly unnecessary high-density commercial development -- I could accept the concept that sometimes local government could indeed seem to be the "lowest" form of government. And this same observation could occasionally be made about almost any city or county government at a time when -- by a particular act -- it might have happened to have made it possible for some well-heeled, high-pressure developer to desecrate some part of the California coast with some especially odious nightmare monstrosity.

It is, in fact, because of the folly or the dereliction of local government in too many places along the California coast, that the Proposition 20 initiative won approval on a state-wide ballot. And one of the first fruits of that initiative is the massive 385-page Preliminary Coastal Plan, with its many detailed charts, upon which a public hearing was held before a large crowd at Sunset Center last week by the State Coastal Commission, which was established -- along with Regional Commissions -- by that Proposition 20 initiative.

Many speakers of the same cast of mind and point of view as the one who used that "lowest level" terminology for local government, took strong exception to the proposed inclusion in the Preliminary Coastal Plan of the entire Carmel River watershed within an extension of the coastal zone, opposite Carmel, which would take in the whole Carmel Valley.

This proposed inclusion of the entire Carmel Valley in a permanently established coastal zone, is in accord with my proposal that California should take special steps to protect from the potential ravages of big developers and of giant enterprise, the uniquely endowed Carmel and Carmel Valley areas. Readers may recall that I have called this proposal the Heritage City Plan. Copies of it have been for several years in the hands of state agencies in Sacramento -- notably the Council on Intergovernmental Relations.

The inclusion of the Carmel Valley in a proposed permanent coastal zone, therefore seems to me a step which could ultimately save that irreplaceable and magnificent land resource from the bludgeonings of mindless bulldozers.

Not only do I believe that the whole Carmel Valley should be included in a permanent state-established coastal zone, but I also believe that permits not only from local government but also from a regional component of a state-wide coastal-control agency, should be required before any important land-use development is ever authorized.

Some readers may recall the greatly-disputed 3-to-2 approval which county supervisors gave to a subsidiary of Standard Oil (Humble Oil) ten years ago, when that giant industry wanted to set up a huge oil refinery in the Moss Landing area. Only through enormous effort by thousands of public spirited citizens was the intent of that narrowly approved oil-refinery permit, eventually defeated, after county government had unfortunately given it the green light.

If a permit from a regional component of a state-wide coastal agency had been required -- in addition to that permit just barely approved by county government -- the threat of an oil refinery might never have had to produce the bitter public controversy it did before Standard Oil finally decided to build its refinery in the San Francisco Bay Area where other refineries already were located.

It was by another 3-to-2 vote of county supervisors that an indirect subsidiary of Prudential Life received permission three years ago to build a massive hotel-and-housing development on the Odello artichoke ranch near the mouth of the Carmel River. Again, the requirement of a permit from a regional branch of a statewide coastal agency, could have negated a permit narrowly approved by the local government which had jurisdiction.

Sale of the larger, and western, portion of the Odello ranch to the state, has removed that portion from any future high-density development, while the possibility presently exists that the Carmel Sanitary District may be able to acquire the rest of the Odello ranch for ponding purposes. However if the Odello ranch continues in farm use, it will be no thanks to county government.

Whenever a big developer presents his case to local government, he and all his minions -- lawyers, planners, architects, engineers -- have a tendency to overwhelm and overawe local government which too often does not have readily at hand the personnel or the data to dispute or to counteract successfully the well-prepared experts who fact it. In addition, such a developer often has highly skilled public relations people to prepare the way for his experts, and -- in effect -- to brainwash both local government and local government's constituents.

It is because of my own eleven years in local government here, that I believe it is important that a regional component of a statewide coastal agency -- such as the present Central Coast Commission -- should continue to have a say in what eventually may become a permanent state-established coastal zone, and thus to have a say, along with local government, in future developments in the whole Carmel River watershed.

The mayor's report

By BERNARD ANDERSON

No sooner had I received my last week's Pine Cone and checked the Mayor's Report than I noticed Dorothy Chapman's name was not on the list of women who are serving on the municipal commissions. Dorothy, who now serves the city as a member of the Cultural Commission, should be listed among the Dean's list of women who have participated in Carmel's civic activities. In addition, her financing made possible the construction of the Chapman meeting room at Sunset Center.

Since I had discarded my rough draft of the Report, I don't know who to blame for the omission. Was it a misprint of the Pine Cone, the secretary who typed the Report or is the pie on my face? In any event the list of women was not intended to be complete. If so, Lois Renk's name (she served as chairman of the Cultural Commission) would have been included.

All of which goes to prove that whenever a glossary of names is compiled, a thorough job of research should be done. I believe my dad had the tactful and diplomatic system. Dad came from Sweden in the late eighties. When he passed away I found a number of letters which he had written to his mother back in Malmo. He always ended his letters with "Halsa pa alla, ingen namd och ingen glomt."

For those who haven't had the privilege of descent from Scandinavian stock, the phrase translates into English as follows: "Give my greetings to everyone, no one named and no one forgotten."

Since we are speaking of human nature and its frailties, I would like to finish this week's report with Betty Canary's comments on that subject which was published by Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Sanitary district considers hiring full time engineer

By TOM LUECK

The Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors has taken under consideration a proposal to hire a full time district engineer. The proposal, which was presented by board member Earl Moser, was discussed at the district's regular monthly meeting Monday night in Carmel city hall chambers.

Engineering functions, including design of facilities, have been handled for the district for 35 years by Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco. While acting in a consulting capacity, the district engineers have been on the job almost constantly over the last year conducting preliminary studies for the proposed land renovation of effluent operation on the eastern Odello artichoke fields, and drawing up plans for a new digester and other facilities at the sewage treatment plant.

Meeting for the first time in Carmel city hall chambers, which has become the new location for public meetings of the sanitary district, Moser told other board members that "it is a question of economics."

"I have never thought that a full time engineer would take the place of our general manager, and this has absolutely no reflection on the job that has been done by our engineers in the past," he said. Suggesting that "overhead, sustenance, and travel expenses" accrued over the past year while representatives of Kennedy Engineers have made frequent trips from San Francisco have been a significant expense for the district, he stated "we should find out exactly what we are paying and compare it to the cost of hiring a staff engineer."

Moser indicated that such an addition to the district staff would not take over the entire job which is now handled by Kennedy engineers, but would be

Cum Laude Society at RLS

The academic dean of Robert Louis Stevenson School, Frank B. Keith, has announced the names of the members of the junior and senior classes selected for initiation into the Cum Laude Society, the national honor society of independent secondary schools. The Initiation Ceremony was held at Robert Louis Stevenson School in the Eleanor Donnelly Erdman Memorial Chapel on May 11.

RLS has had a Cum Laude Society Chapter for twelve years. Eligibility for admission to the society requires senior students to be in the upper twenty percent of their class and junior students in the upper ten responsible for the "day by day" engineering items.

Support for the proposal came from board member Donald Kirk, who stated "it's not totally a matter of economics. It's the cost of the board president...doing a lot that I don't think he should be required to do. It's been a full time job ever since I've been on the board."

"I am forced to do many things that I shouldn't be doing," concurred board president Herman Schull. "I shouldn't be operating in an engineering capacity."

Opposition to the proposal came from board members James Pruitt and Ted Weller. "We need it like a hole in the head," argued Pruitt. "We've got a good team running the district. When you hire an engineer and he earns more than the district manager, what does that do to the attitude of the staff," he questioned.

Weller told the board that he would only agree to the proposal for a full time engineer if the new employee were to work directly under the district manager.

Robert Kennedy, head of the consulting engineering firm who was present at this week's meeting, speculated that a competent engineer for the district's purposes might demand a salary in the neighborhood of $2,000 to $2,200 per month.

"Some time ago we concurred that there would come a time when it would be desirable to add a district engineer on the payroll," he said. He advised the board to prepare a specific job description and list of necessary qualifications before pursuing the matter any further, in order to arrive at a more accurate estimate of economic implications.

The matter was continued for further discussion at later meetings of the board over the position voiced by Weller and Pruitt that it should be tabled indefinitely.

In other business before the board this week:

--A contract was officially approved for monitoring of water quality near the district's ocean outfall in Carmel Bay. Kinnetic Laboratories of Santa Cruz, which submitted the low bid of $15,900, will undertake the monitoring program for the next year.

--Engineer Kennedy reported that the testing program on the Odello artichoke fields will be completed at the end of May. The board authorized its general manager, Max Drewien, to contract bulldozers and put the property back into the condition it was in before the testing program began over one year ago.

Congressional voting digest

Pine Cone Washington Bureau

The Senate passed an energy measure last month, which among other things, would authorize the President to ration gasoline in times of emergency--however the bill met with "no" votes from Senators John Tunney and Alan Cranston.

The Senate also passed a conference report on the aid to South Vietnam bill by a 3-1 margin, but the two senators went against the majority and voted no. (The final aid to South Vietnam bill was rejected by the House during the first week in May.)

Area representative Burt Talcott voted yes on six health, education and welfare measures passed by the House last month.

Following are the votes for the area's congressional delegation, including those mentioned above, for the month of April.

Senate

1. Passed bill to authorize $654 million during fiscal 1975-77 for nurse training and $1.9 billion in fiscal 1975-76 for health services program, including community health centers, 77-14. Both senators voted no.

2. Passed bill authorizing President to ration gasoline, restrict fuel exports, restrict the raising of "old oil" prices and allow a price increase to $7.50 per barrel, from $5.25, for oil taken from existing wells, 60-25. The bill also extended the 1973 Emergency Allocation Act through March 1, 1976. Both voted no.

3. Passed bill giving HEW secretary authority to assure safety and effectiveness of medical devices such as heart pacemakers and intrauterine birth control devices (IUDs) by an 88-5 vote, with both senators voting no.

4. Passed conference report for $327 million in aid to South Vietnam, 46-17, with both senators voting no.

Amendments to the bill included:

-to delete all provisions of the bill except those authorizing funds for humanitarian aid through the U.N. and other international organizations, rejected 10-79, with both senators voting no.

-to assure no funds in the bill will be used for military aid to South Vietnam, rejected 32-61, with both senators voting yes.

--amendment to delete from the bill a provision permitting U.S. troops to assist in the withdrawal of American and foreign personnel from South Vietnam, rejected 12-80, with both senators voting no.

--amendment to Emergency Housing bill to authorize $750 for loans to unemployed persons unable to make mortgage payments, passed 89-1 with Cranston voting yes and Tunney not voting.

House

1. Voted to authorize $2.6 billion in fiscal 1976-79 under the Older American Act to assist elderly and increase funding of ACTION programs, 377-19. Talcott voted yes.

2. Appropriated $755.4 million for the National Science Foundation by a 390-22 vote with Talcott voting yes.

3. Bill to extend special feeding programs for children through Sept. 30, 1975 passed 396-22 with Talcott voting yes.

4. A $188.75 million bill to aid those with learning problems and cerebral palsy passed 398-5, with Talcott voting yes.

5. Passed bill to authorize $500 million for temporary loans to unemployed persons unable to meet mortgage payments by a 321-21 with Talcott voting no.

6. Adopted House resolution that any member who pleaded guilty to a crime or was convicted and sentenced to two or more years imprisonment should voluntarily refrain from floor or committee, 360-37, with the congressman voting yes.

7. Passed amendment to the $8.7 billion education bill prohibiting HEW from issuing regulations or withholding funds from school districts to force them to integrate physical education classes and youth organizations by sex, 253-145, with Talcott voting yes.

8. Passed farm bill conference report to raise price supports and loan rates for 1975 wheat, cotton, corn and other feed grains and to set dairy price supports at 80 percent of parity with quarterly adjustments for the period ending March 31, 1976, 248-166 with Talcott voting no.

9. House version of South Vietnam Assistance bill passed 230-187, with Talcott voting yes.

Amendments included:

-amendment in the form of a substitute bill to add $150 million in military aid, rejected 22-394 with Talcott voting no.

-to add provision pointing out flagrant North Vietnamese and Viet Cong violations of the Paris Peace Accords, passed 345-68 with Talcott voting yes.

Restricting to 30 days after enactment of the bill the use of U.S. forces for participation in evacuating American and foreign personnel, rejected 196-208 with Talcott voting no.

-to authorize humanitarian assistance through the U.N. and other international groups, rejected with Talcott voting no.

-to delete a provision waiving prohibitions against the use of funds for the reintroduction of U.S. forces to Indochina rejected 151-262 with Talcott voting no.

-to establish a 1-day limit for evacuation procedures rejected 97-311, with Talcott voting no.

10. Passed bill to authorize $1.118 billion for Amtrak, 280-63 with Talcott voting yes.

League of Women Voters shows coastal plan support

A position which is generally supportive of the proposed Coastal Plan has been announced by Janice O'Brien, president of the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula. In a statement prepared for the Coastal Commission hearing of May 6, the League comments on policies of the plan which are of special concern to the local league as applied to the Monterey County coast. A statewide league position as to governmental machinery for regulation of coastal land use is being formulated by the League of Women Voters of California.

The Monterey Peninsula League supports:

- preservation of Elkhorn Slough

- acquisition of beaches and dunes for open space and recreational use where inclusion of the entire Carmel River watershed in the coastal planning area

- policies in the plan dealing with water resource management

- coordination of the Monterey County Transportation Plan with the Coastal Plan.

"Although it remains an open question how the Coastal Plan is to be implemented, the important point is that controls are needed," Mrs. O'Brien stated. "The League congratulates the Coast Commission on the Plan, and on the extent to which public opinion has been taken into account in preparation of the Plan."

Can muscle balancing help you?

The Carmel Chiropractic Arts Center utilizes Applied Kinesiology, or muscle balancing, as one of its therapies. The staff also teaches a simplified form of therapy to members of the community free of charge. The treatment has helped many people across the United States by relieving pain, tension and anxiety through natural methods. The basis of treatment is the use of reflex massage points on the torso, holding points on the skull, and acupuncture points to test and integrate muscles into a coordinated, balanced functional unit.

Applied Kinesiology demonstration classes are held in the Northern California Savings & Loan building in Carmel and are announced in the Pine Cone.

For information about classes or appointments for examinations or treatments, call Carmel Chiropractic Arts Center - 625-2555.

Sought for school

Anyone for cabooses?

By CHRIS KELLER

What would the children of migrant workers do with a bunch of railroad cabooses?

A lot, says Georgianne Matthews of Carmel who is founder of the GEM-Bach Mai Foundation.

The GEM-Bach Mai Foundation has recently sent out a proposal to various donor foundations and agencies seeking support for a unique educational project: transforming old cabooses into school rooms for the pre-school youngsters of migrant workers in the Salinas or Watsonville areas.

"What we're planning is a day school for migrant children, as well as other ethnic children, who normally would not have this type of educational program available," explained Georgianne in an interview at her Carmel home last week.

"I really feel this is one of the basic needs in California."

Although the proposals went out just over a month ago, the idea has already received positive support from Peter Ferrante of the Crosby Fund, and Southern Pacific is "considering" the possibility of selling or donating some cabooses.

"It's difficult to get these old cabooses, but we've been told we may get them by June. In which case we could open the school by fall of this year."

Georgianne and her co-worker Rajoo Khambatta envision situating the caboose school not far from labor camps so that children can ride the buses to the school with parents on their way to the fields. To begin with they would have two or three cabooses coupled and standing on about five acres of land.

According to the women's research and figures from the office of Migrant Education there are at least 10,000 children in the Salinas area and 5,000 in the Watsonville area that would stand to profit from this educational opportunity.

Bombay, India

This type of educational project is not new to Georgianne and her foundation. In 1972, along with Mrs. Najoo J. Khambatta, a teacher and speech therapist, the GEM-Bach Mai Foundation established the KAM Centre for Educational Therapy in Bombay, India.

The center served over one hundred children, half of whom were beggar children who lived on the streets of Bombay. Each morning Georgianne would wash and dress them in clean clothing and then hold classes, English classes and special education classes for handicapped children.

She and Rajoo then attempted to integrate the street children with the children from homes and families. Beyond teaching the children that there was more to life than the misery they lived daily on the streets, the foundation encouraged understanding between these very poor, who have been beggars for generations, and children from the higher classes.

At the same time that the foundation established the school, a trust was established under Indian laws, not an easily accomplished feat, Georgianne explained. Georgianne worked in Bombay until 1974, at which time the trust was turned over to another school carrying on similar work.

Residential School

She returned to Carmel and Rajoo came with her. Together they have developed the proposal for ALMA, or Academy of Learning, Music and Arts, which includes not only the caboose school plans, but another much more extensive plan for a permanent private resident school to serve migrant worker's children and other minority children.

According to the architectural plans included in the proposal, this more elaborate school would be a children's fantasy-land as far as schools go. It would be situated on about 200 acres within the boundaries of Monterey County. Many of the classes would be taught out of doors and education would encompass academic study, as well as vocational, agricultural and recreational undertakings. A central lodge and dining facility would serve also as a center for parents who would be encouraged to attend lectures on

"Not a day has gone by since I was fourteen years old that I haven't thought of this ideal school... Now I'm thirty-five years old but I still have this youthful impatience about it..." said Georgianne.

In addition, she has very definite ideas of what education should consist of and is a follower of educators Piaget and Bruner. Her mothers, Katherine Matthews, taught school and her three sisters are all school teachers.

GEORGIANNE MATTHEWS AND Rajoo Khambatta of the GEM-Bach Mai Foundation flip through the pages of their proposal which includes plans for a private day school for children of migrant workers in Monterey County. An unusual feature of the school will be its construction: three or four railroad cabooses coupled on several acres of land near Salinas or Watsonville.

any variety of subjects that will allow them to "grow" in a creative way along with their children.

Resident children would be housed in rustic cabins on the property.

Georgianne herself has a masters in special education.

But first things first, and right now all she's hoping for are some grants to put her caboose on the track.

Susan Keane

'No one is really painting the people'

By CHRIS KELLER

A new art gallery will open in Carmel June 2 that represents quite an achievement by a very local artist. Susan Keane, 27, attended Sunset School and graduated from Carmel High School.

Her large, bold paintings of faces and animals will fill the former Carmel Crispers shop on Dolores south of Ocean Avenue. Currently they are on exhibit in the large gallery at the Pacific Grove Art Center.

"I really like to present a bold composition. I consider my work to be something different. Everyone is painting seascapes and old barns, but no one is really painting the people, their faces," said the quiet, blond artist in her new working studio at the Art Center.

Her paintings are dramatic, almost startling. They are large faces of people: old people, young bearded people, children.

She has rendered the faces in dark, earthy colors — reds, oranges, browns and golds. The powerful quality of effect of the paintings are due, in part, to her skillful use of light.

"When I was a kid I was fascinated with the way Rembrandt handled light. With the special white paint (imported from Holland) I use, I try to capture some of that feeling," she explained.

She explained that most white oils tend to turn chalky or pasty on the canvas. She maintains that this imported white paint, creamier than other brands, helps her achieve the degree of luminosity so important to her portraits.

The other factor in the dramatic quality of her paintings is the extreme size of the face in relation to the canvas and frame. Each face barely fits in its frame — and sometimes doesn't entirely. A chin is cut off, or the top of the head. The overall effect is that of a closely cropped photograph in which the features of the face jump out at the viewer.

Susan has an interesting background, one that has shaped her in becoming an artist. She is the daughter of Walter Keane, the artist who became internationally known for his paintings of big-eyed children.

As a child Susan traveled extensively with her father who now lives in London. She's made ten trips to Europe and often just wanders with a camera and sketch pad concentrating on faces. Some of her favorite people were the "tinkers" or gypsies in Scotland.

Since her days at Carmel High (when it took her two weeks to persuade officials to let her enroll in a boys-only metal shop class) Susan has gone on to Chouinard California Institute of the Arts in Los Angeles and California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland. In addition she studied portraiture in the strict, old world manner with Thomas Leighton in San Francisco.

THE MUSIC CORNER

BY IRVING W. GREENBERG

A FABULOUS SONG RECITAL

Last Sunday, The Carmel Music Society offered as its final concert of the present season, Fredrica von Stade, mezzo-soprano, and one of the most gifted young luminaries of the Metropolitan Opera Co., in a program of operatic arias, concert selections and folk songs.

In the featured work, the Gustav Mahler song cycle "Lieder eines fahrenden Geselle" (Songs of a Wayfarer), it consists of four songs, and they seem to represent a portrait of the composer himself as a young man unhappily in love. These are bitter-sweet songs, touched with the coloration of an Austrian summer, and with the bleak, haunting sorrows of an Austrian winter. Both lyrics and music are Mahler's, the creation of his youthful, multi-faceted genius. So lingering are these songs in Mahler's mind, as well as in his listeners', that several reappear in later compositions; the mood and bird-song style of the second one "Ging' heut Morgen ueber's Feld" is heard again in the finale of his Fourth Symphony; and the fourth song, "Die zwei blaue Augen", reappears as the eloquent main-section of the Funeral March in his First Symphony.

Fredrica von Stade is not only a magnificent singer — she is a phenomenon of a singer. She has everything going for her — youth, beauty, an exquisite and encompassing vocal range, and an entrancing and highly compelling dramatic assertiveness. Furthermore, she does all this with a communicative radiance and personal warmth that borders almost on the magical.

The Mahler cycle brought forth a remarkable performance, for in that Miss von Stade had full scope to display her glorious range of tonal coloration, from the veiled dark sound of the opening bars of the first song to the light, bright tone of the middle section; from the open-air freshness of the folk-like melody of the second song culminating in a heart-free shout that had controlled intensity, to the final deadened half-tone. Through everything, Miss von Stade seemed to relive each emotion and communicated it most fervently and nobly shaped to the listening audience.

Of the operatic arias, three stood out preeminently: The Recitative and Aria "Sorgi, o padre" from Bellini's "Bianca e Fernando"; the Aria "Adieu, forets" from Tchaikovsky's "Jeanne d'Arc"; and the Aria "Non piu mesta" from Rossini's "La Cenerentola". Here there was not only vision, conception, and intelligence, but vocalism of a magnificent type that one rarely encounters — fantastic linear, lyric flow,

At the age of 19 she had her own gallery in the North Beach district of San Francisco. She returned to the Monterey Peninsula and opened a gallery at the Pine Inn which she had for three years. Now she plans to maintain a working studio in the Pacific Grove Art Center as well as the new gallery, SH Keane.

Although she loves the weather-beaten, lined faces she finds in Europe she is at home in Carmel. "I can't live away from the ocean. I have to be close enough to hear the waves breaking."

Puppet show to open

This reporter recently had the pleasure of attending a rehearsal of Nick LeFeuvre's Happy Unicorn Puppet Theatre. Opening this Saturday, May 17, at the Studio Theatre, The Puppet Theatre is another example of the Studio's attempts to improve the quality and scope of their theatrical presentations.

LeFeuvre, assisted by Stanley von Warmbrot and Scott Ables, creates an exciting and different afternoon's entertainment. His puppets (whose voices are done by such actors as Betty Fowlston and Bob Lotz) are beautifully fashioned and seem to come alive in the gorgeous sets Mr. LeFeuvre has created.

Puppet theatre has qualities of depth, color, and size that have to be seen to be appreciated. The opening program will consist of two shows. First "Hansel and Gretel", then a demonstration of marionettes at intermission, followed by "Ol' What's 'iz Name" (a delightful spoof of Rumplestiltskin).

There are some things that people do better than puppets, and, on a stage, somethings that puppets do better. These productions are geared toward the magic that the puppets can create and are highly recommended for adults as well as children.

If these weekend matinees (lunch at 11:30, show at 12:30 on Saturdays and Sundays) are successful, LeFeuvre plans on changing the repertoire about every four weeks. For further information, call 624-1661.

McIntyre show to open

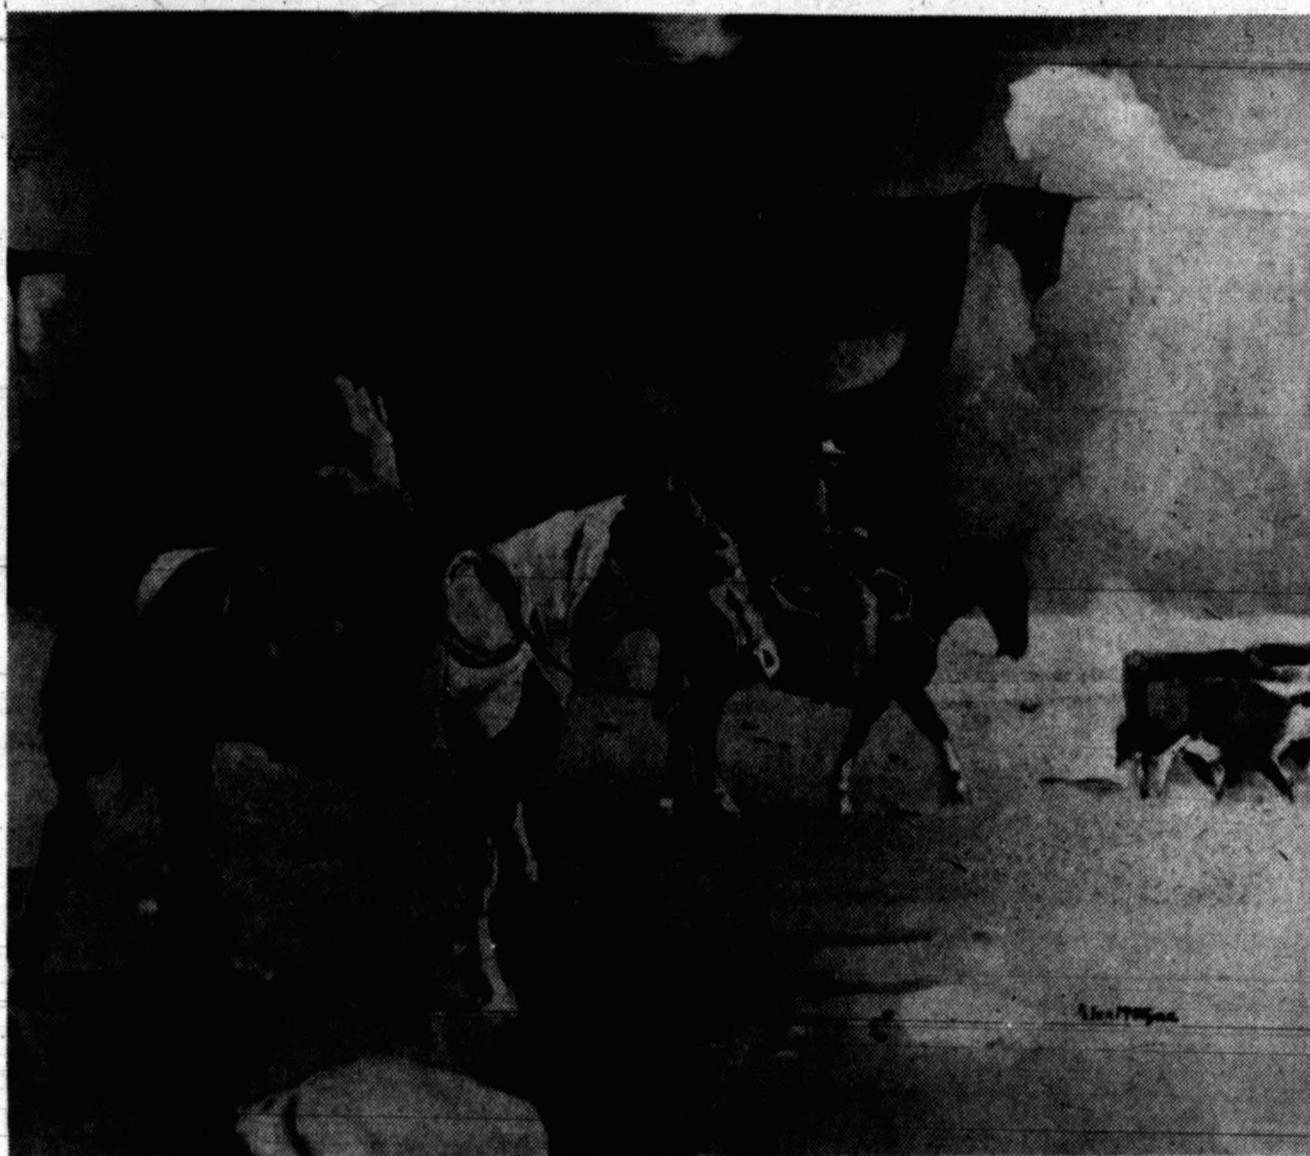

A one-man show of oil, watercolor, charcoal, and pen and ink paintings by Peter McIntyre opens this Saturday, May 17, at Gallery Americana.

Peter McIntyre is an internationally acclaimed artist and writer who was born in Dunedin, New Zealand, in 1910. He was educated at the University of Otago, and, at the age of 20, went to London to study at the Slade School. McIntyre's subsequent work in the arts included book and magazine illustration, and stage decor. At the outbreak of war, he joined a New Zealand volunteer unit formed in London as an anti-tank battery and served as a gunner in Egypt. Here he was "discovered" by General Freyberg, who commissioned him as Official War Artist. In this capacity, McIntyre served in Greece, Crete, North Africa, and Italy and created many memorable works of art.

After the war, he returned to New Zealand and has lived there since except for painting trips to the Antarctic, to Hong Kong, the Pacific, and his American West travels that produced Peter McIntyre's West. Previous publications include his illustrated autobiography, The Painted Years, and two other large-format color volumes, Peter McIntyre's New Zealand and Peter McIntyre's Pacific.

Early in 1970, Queen Elizabeth awarded the coveted Order of the British Empire to Peter McIntyre for his increasing success as an author and for his accomplishments in the fine arts.

Peter McIntyre and his wife, who is also a New Zealander, raised their son and daughter in their Wellington town house with frequent sojourns to their country cottage — a trout fishing locale deep in the heart of King Country. One finds much of the inspiration of Peter McIntyre's homeland in his paintings; but, wherever this humanist-environmentalist paints, he is faithful to essences. The light-filled evanescence between his delineation of the subject and its ambience inspirationally transcends that which is merely beautiful.

McIntyre's exhibit at Gallery Americana, at the corner of Sixth and Lincoln, will be the largest collection of his paintings in recent years. The artist will fly from New Zealand to Carmel and will be present for a champagne reception to mark the opening of his show Saturday, May 17, 4 to 8 p.m. The public is invited.

'Così Fan Tutte' opens Friday

The Hidden Valley Music Seminars will present Mozart's opera "Così Fan Tutte" (They All Do It) in the campus theatre opening on May 16. The musical direction of "Così Fan Tutte" is in the hands of pianist conductor Randall Bare, former assistant conductor and accompanist for the Music Seminars who also conducted Mozart's "Don Giovanni" at Hidden Valley earlier this year. Also returning to direct "Così Fan Tutte" is Robert Darling, professional designer-director who has received critical acclaim for his work with the San Francisco

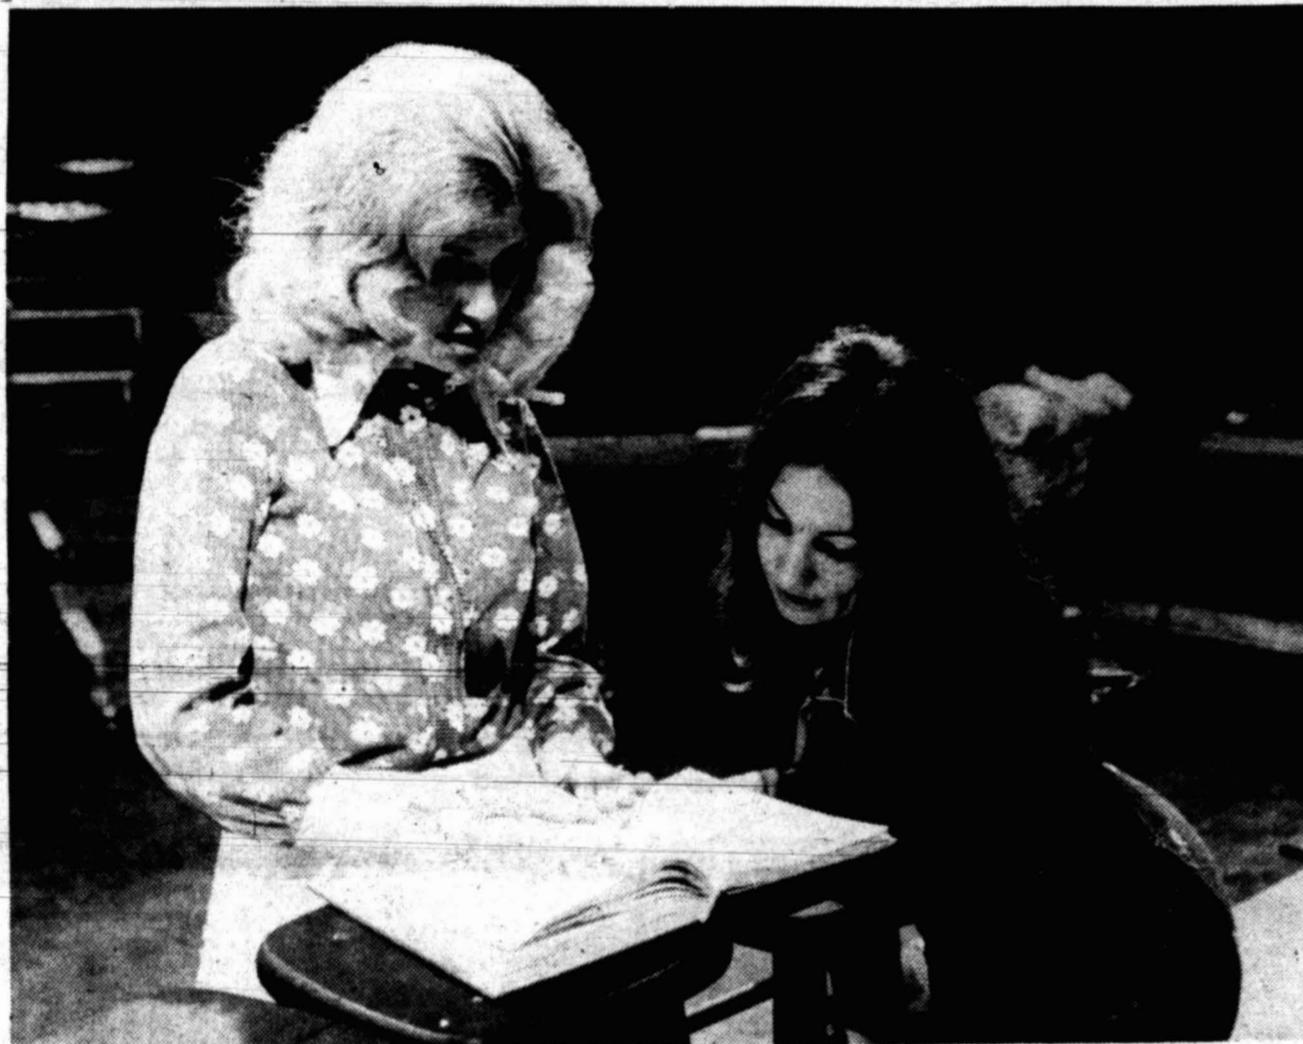

Opera Company, the Lyric Opera of Chicago, Santa Fe Opera, and with the opera companies of San Diego, Anchorage, Denver, and Kansas City.

The four principals from the cast of "Don Giovanni" are returning to sing in "Così Fan Tutte." Sue Gorenuc, formerly of the Lucerne Opera and San Francisco Spring Opera, will sing the role of Fiordiligi; Marilyn Coles, newly signed member of the Oldenburg Opera in Germany, will sing the role of Dorabella; John Giger, who sang the role of Don Giovanni, will take the role of Guglielmo; and Reg Huston, two-time finalist in the Western Metropolitan Opera Auditions, returns to sing the role of Don Alfonso. New members of the cast for "Così Fan Tutte" are lyric tenor Michael Rosso, student of Simoneau and recently seen as Camille in Lehar's "Merry Widow" with the San Francisco Lamplighters; and soprano Claudette Peterson, recent graduate of the San Francisco Conservatory and winner of the Henry Holt competition, who will sing the role of Despina in this production.

Reservations for "Così Fan Tutte" are limited by the size of the theatre and the nature of the production to 200 per performance. Reservations will be honored in the order in which they are received by the Carmel Valley office of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars. There are ten performances scheduled — May 16, 17, 18, 23, 24, 25, 26, 30, 31, and June 1. All tickets are $4.50. Telephone 659-3115 for reservations.

ON LEAVE FROM the San Francisco Opera, Marilyn Coles and Sue Gorenuc reexamine the score of "Così Fan Tutte" which opens May 16 at Hidden Valley.

melodic invocation in a dramatic, expressive and rhapsodic manner, coupled with mellow, magnificent pianissimi effects. There was never a moment of wavering or the slightest harshness, but everything was pervaded with a sweetness, fine characterization and most meditative and introspective peroration. In addition, her French and Italian diction was perfectly defined.

The impressionistic musical contours and figures of the Debussy Songs came through with a joyful volatility, and her rendition of these songs was highly infectious, with impeccable exposition of the wonderful tonality of her superb middle register.

In the "Chants de France", there was an effortless orientation to the truly Gallic nature of these songs, exhibited with spirit, refinement and elegance. Particularly outstanding was her rendition of the "Chant de Haut-Dauphine" ("Ou irai-je me plaindre?"). In this song, she not only exposed it in a most intelligent and erudite manner, but she related exceedingly well to the musical patois of the province it described.

The Irish Country Songs, although she sang them most charmingly and with romantic implications, were the least compelling, in the mind of this reviewer. And this was not due to her lack of vocal or artistic temperament, but merely to the trivia of the musical material. She is too great an artist to waste her fantastic talents on this type of material.

The Mozart aria "Vou che sapete" from "Le Nozze di Figaro", which opened the program, as well as the Handel aria "O had I Jubal's Lyre" from "Joshua", were conceived in a highly colored tonal exposition with lovely variegated nuances, but these did not have the full impact that one could have expected. But these are extremely small peccadillos in a recital of such gracious and all-encompassing magnitude, dignity, and persuasiveness.

As an encore, she sang in her inimitable, exquisite manner an aria from Offenbach's "La Perichole".

H. William Glazier, her accompanist, was extremely sensitive in his pianistic approach, and completely integrated into a harmonious whole with Miss von Stade.

This was an evening of the most compelling and ingratiating vocalism, that will long be remembered and treasured by the listening audience, which attested to its great enjoyment by the many plaudits, culminating in a standing ovation.

NEW RECORDING

MOZART: DON GIOVANNI (Soloists — The English Chamber Orchestra — The Scottish Opera Chorus — conducted by Daniel Barenboim — Angel SLD-3811 — 4 discs).

Don Giovanni was the second collaboration of Mozart and the librettist da Ponte, coming just a year after the Marriage of Figaro. Don Giovanni was commissioned by the Bondini Opera Co. in Prague, which had scored a resounding success with Figaro. What that company wanted was another comic opera in like vein, but, recognizing Mozart's power and passion, da Ponte emphasized the dramatic element in his text, though without abandoning comic and satiric nuances; and Mozart, ever sensitive, alternated the light and comic strokes, with darker colors of genuine tragedy. Recognizing that he had produced neither an opera buffa nor an opera seria, but a combination of both, Mozart applied to his new opera the designation of dramma giocoso or "gay drama." The gaiety is there; in the character of Leporello, in the playful quarrels and reconciliations of Masetto and Zerlina, in the fleet and witty music that Mozart wrote for these opera-buffa characters. The Italian grace of Don Giovanni's serenade and Don Ottavio's love songs is also in the opera-buffa tradition. But it is the tragic element, rather than the comic, that is accentuated, particularly in the characterization of Don Giovanni. And it is with this tragedy that this opera arrives at its highest plane of eloquence: with Donna Anna's terrible grief in the first scene or the cataclysmic music with which Don Giovanni meets his doom in the closing one. That this unconventional alternation of comedy and tragedy did not confuse its first audience speaks volumes for its discrimination. Since its first performance, Don Giovanni has been generally accepted as Mozart's greatest opera.

Based on the Edinburgh Festival production, this recording, conducted by Daniel Barenboim, has an approach that is not only unusual for Mozart, but it is steeped in sentimentality and romanticism and overstatement. The approach to Mozart, in the use of a chamber orchestra, is very much within the nature of the medium, but the textural richness and the opacity of the orchestral tonality tend to a heaviness that vitiates the lightness and crispness to characteristic of the Mozart idiom.

The high water mark of this recording is the vocalism and dramatic intensity of Roger Soyer in the title role of Don Giovanni. His spectacular cantilena line in the aria "La ci darem la mano," and his exquisite delineation of the Serenade, are two examples of the effective display of his supreme artistry.

Luigi Alva as Don Ottavio, sings with stylistic refinement and elegance and with a magnificent tonal lustre. Geraint

Evans as Leporello is a very serious buffoon, and this tends to dilute the basic essential character and conception of this role. His vocalism, however, is finely controlled, and a specific example of his evocation is in the aria featuring the Catalogue Song ("Madamina! Il catalogo e questo").

Alberto Rinaldi as Masetto sings his aria in low level rendition, which tends to be only an expedient, and not Mozart's original intention of a higher vocal intention.

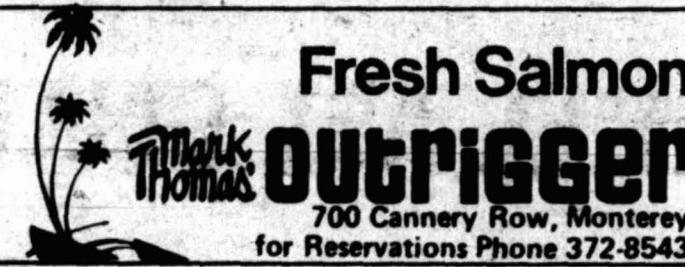

Heather Harper's Donna Elvira is conceived in an impressive manner, but it is somewhat pallid, lacking the tempestuous fury and fiery excitement of this outraged female. Antigone Sgourda as Donna Anna, is temperamentally too obsessed for this role, lacking the requisite piquancy, poignancy and meditative nostalgia that is essential. However, Helen Donath as Zerlina is absolutely charming and compelling, singing with a fresh, poised and beautiful articulate conception. She has that naive, bubbling freshness that makes the role in her hands so outstanding.

The Chorus sings gracefully and with involvement, and the Orchestra performs with fine intonation and brilliant evocation, given the limitations imposed on it by the conductors, Daniel Barenboim. Somehow, this conductor does not give one the feeling that he is the man for this Mozart opera. The surfaces are technically excellent; the sound is clear, bright and resonant. The recommendation here is not this recording, but a previous one by Angel, featuring Schwartzkopf, Sutherland, and others on Angel S-3605.

City Council

Library public hearing to be held

Following lengthy discussion Tuesday night in city hall chambers, the Carmel City Council voted to set a public hearing on June 3 regarding proposals that the Harrison Memorial Library be withdrawn from the Monterey County Free Library System.

The council also indicated the the two other facets of the local library's three-fold affiliation with the county will be discussed during the next two months. Councilman Mike Brown, who introduced a proposal at the May meeting of the council that at least part of the county affiliation should be discontinued, announced that the library's contractual arrangement with Salinas by which an annual subsidy is received in return for circulation of books to patrons residing outside the city limits will be discussed at the June 3 meeting. Continued participation in the Monterey Bay Area Cooperative library system (MOBAC) will be discussed at the July council session, he said.

As at the May meeting, a majority of the council seemed in favor of withdrawing the library from the county free library system and thereby eliminating a 16.2 cent county library tax for Carmel residents.

As has been pointed out repeatedly by council members and other city officials, the county tax is paid in addition to a 17.7 cent city tax for patrons residing inside the city limits while those outside the city limits pay only the county tax and receive identical library services.

City Administrator Hugh Bayless explained at the onset of testimony that the proposed action cannot be taken prior to a formal public hearing. The issue had been placed on Tuesday night's lengthy council agenda in order to allow members of the Harrison Memorial Library Board to argue their case in support of continuing county affiliation, and county officials were present in order to answer questions from the council.

Pointing out that the county tax-dollar affiliation has been in existence for 60 years, library board member Herb Blanks told the council it has "not been maintained out of affection."

"We have taken a firm position simply because it is a better deal for the city. If we felt we could provide the same services to the city for the same amount doubt not that we would have withdrawn on our own initiative," he said.

When questioned by Councilwoman Florence Josselyn if comparable library services could be provided for Carmel residents if the 16.2 cent were collected by the city rather than the county, board member Peter Dyer responded emphatically "we can't do, and nobody would be able to do, the same job for the money." He referred to the collective purchasing power of the county library system as basic to the economics of the current arrangement.

The county library tax collected from Carmel residents is now returned to the Harrison Memorial Library in the form of cash, books, and services. In response to questions from the council, County Administrator Ed McCauley explained that this year the return will amount to $29,000 in cash, and $30,000 in books and services.

However, he acknowledged, legal ownership of books purchased for the local library through the county system remains in the hands of the county. County books now compose the bulk of the library's children's collection and large parts of the reference collection. When asked if those volumes would have to be returned to the county if the city were to withdraw from its affiliation McCauley stated "the board of supervisors would have to decide that question."

Vietnamese refugees encounter problems with the Burrisse worked with the Civil Corps of Engineers.

By CHRIS KELLER

Mai was a soldier in the South Vietnamese army.

The daughter, Lai, at 22 has just finished her university education and had returned home to "learn how to become a good housewife."

"They left Vietnam without a thing," explained Mrs. Burris.

"They arrived at Travis in cotton shirt sleeves and were given sweaters. We've finally managed to get them some warm clothing for this climate, but now we've got to find them a permanent place to live."

Except for Mai, none of the family speak English, although they speak fluent French.

In halting English Mai explained the way in which the family fled their homeland.

"My brother Huu who is a Lieutenant in the South Vietnamese army realized we should get out as soon as the evacuation started. He has many relations with the Americans."

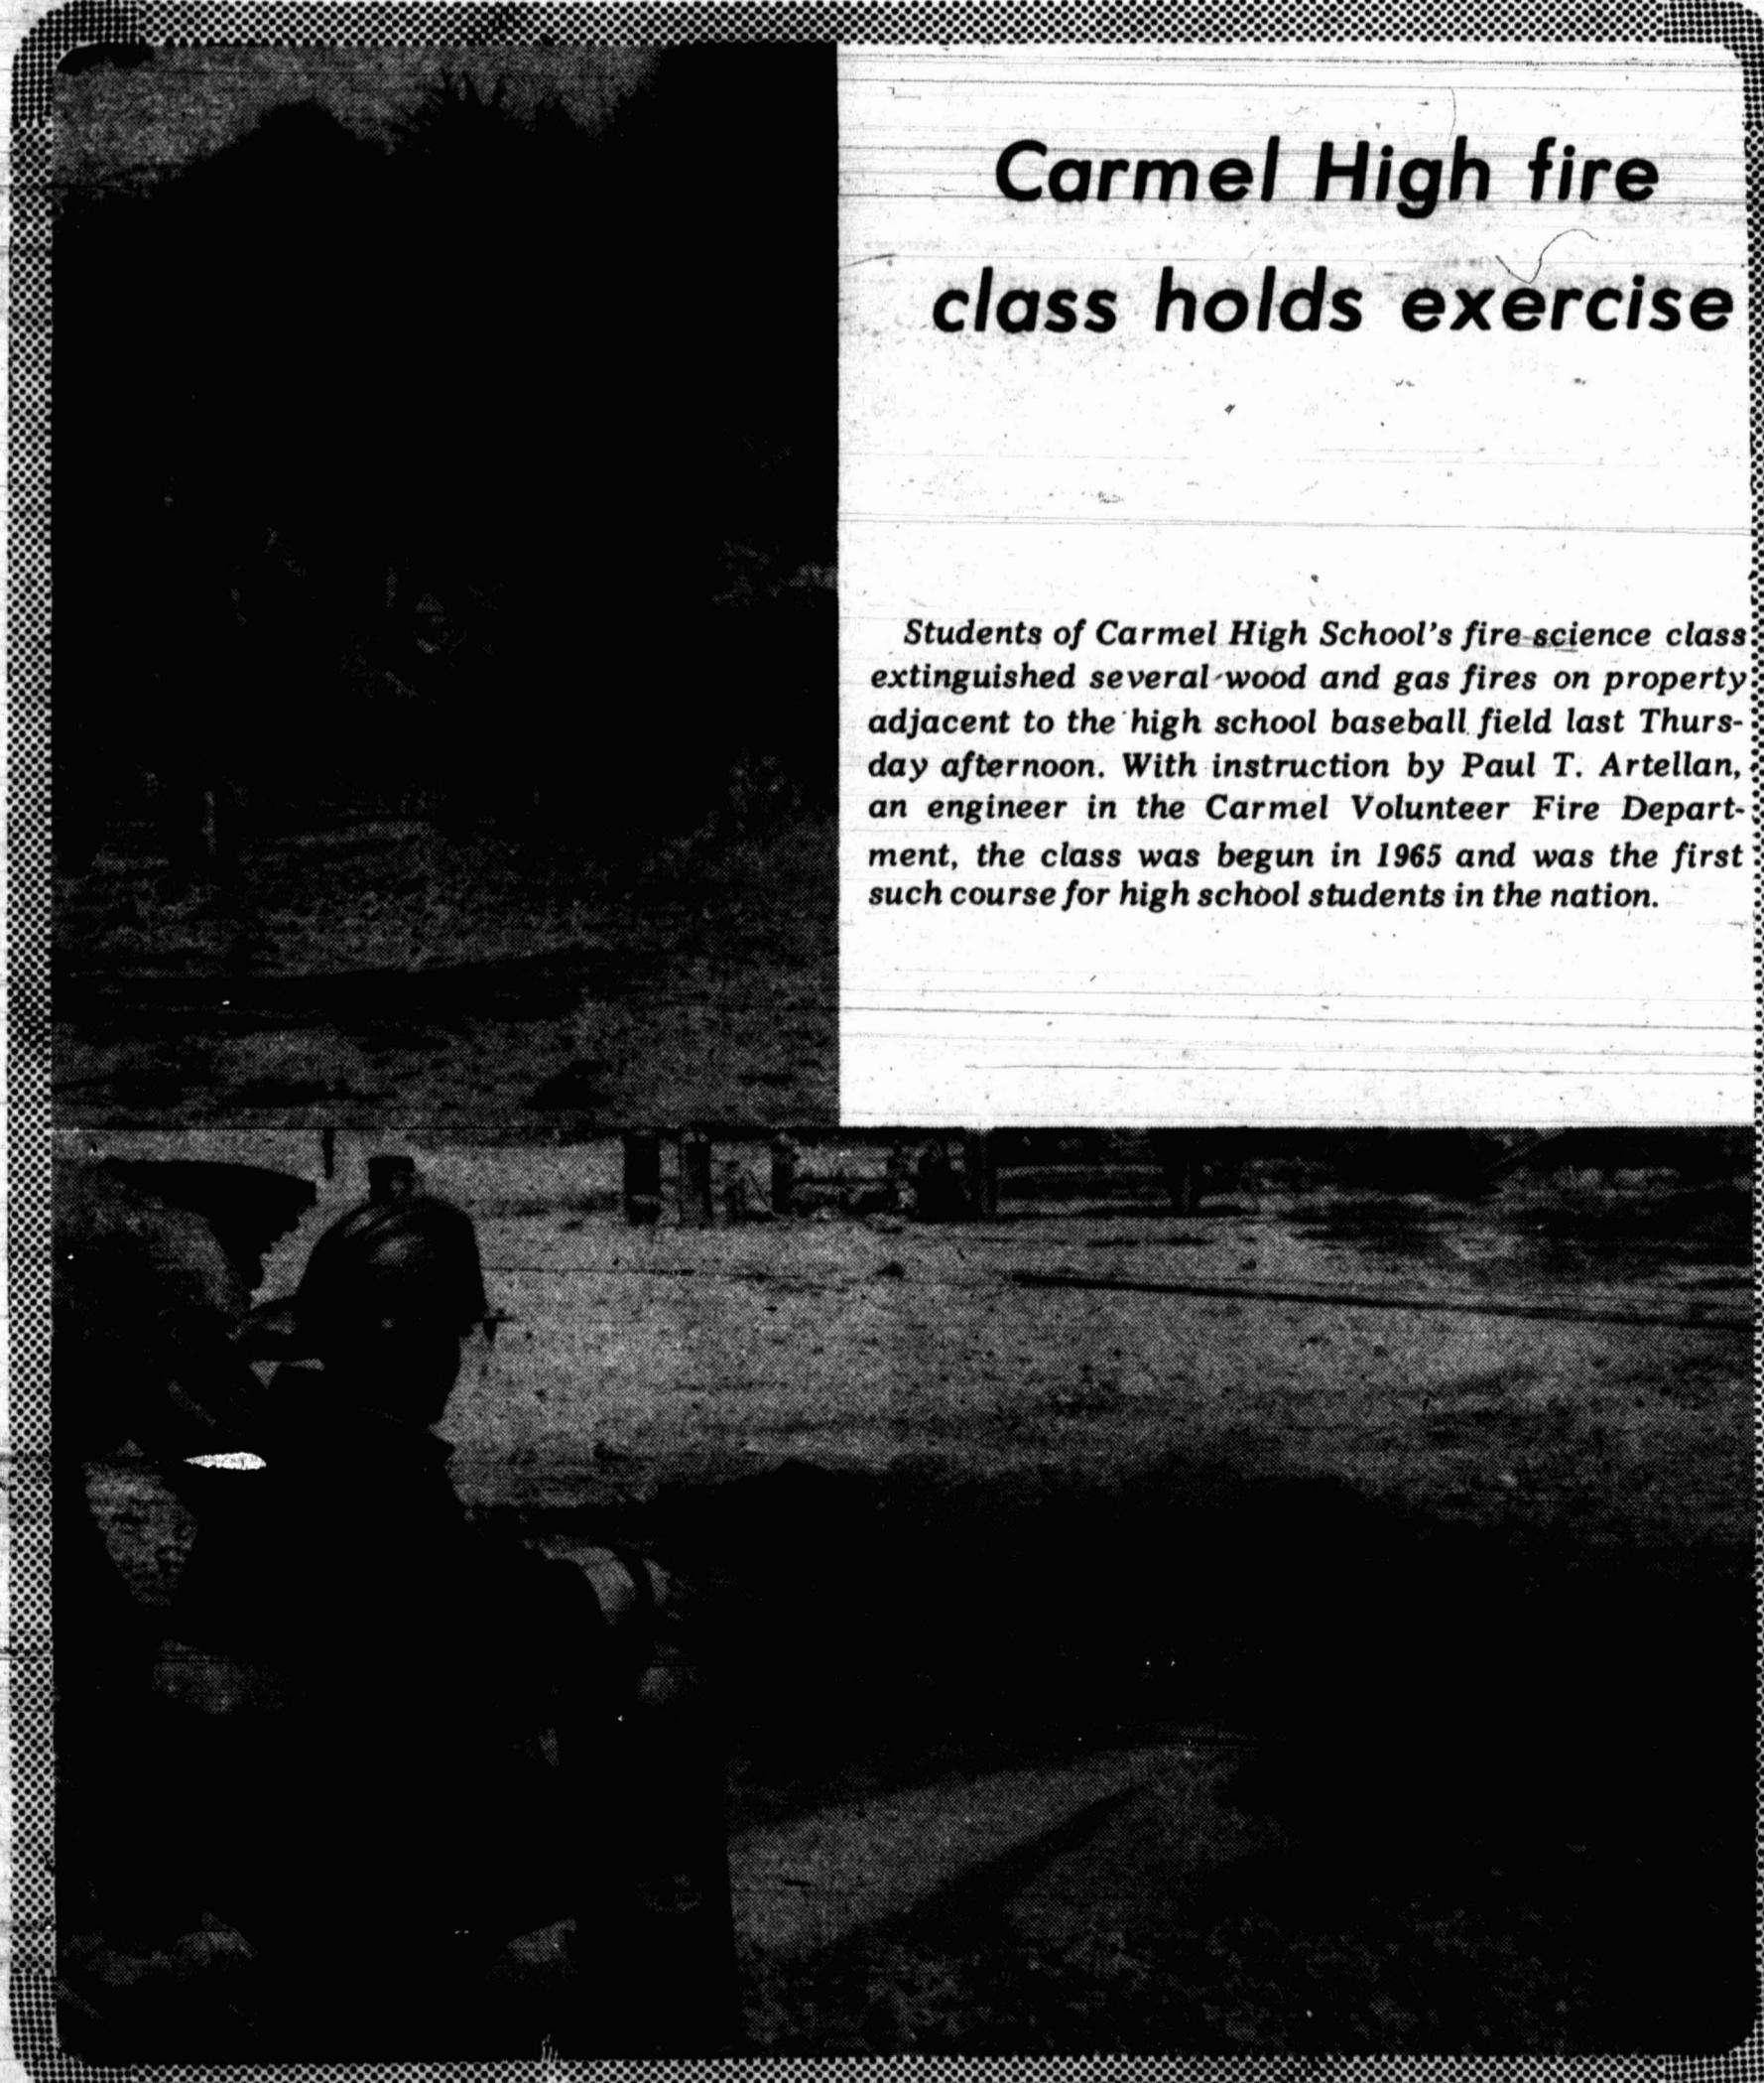

The brother telephoned the family and told them to get ready to leave. He told them not to bother with suitcases but to each carry only a paper sack full of possessions.

Mai himself was thirty miles away with his division of ninety men. The day before there were five hundred, he said.

Bellydancing or— The Seven year Itch

All this furore about the county and the country being short of money for education is a load of codswallop. If the Monterey Recreation Department can get money to teach grandmothers to bellydance, I'm going to cash in on grandfathers and teach them to do the same thing.

The idea came to me upon reading MARY RODRIGUEZ'S column in the HERALD about Mrs. Wuanita Clark, who is teaching a class of 25 students, seven of whom are grandmothers, to bellydance. Anyone can enroll their stomachs and hips, or anything that ails them.

Part of the fun, I gather, is wearing balloon pantaloons, bolero jackets, and diaphanous veils. Seven veils are mandatory for grandmothers.

Then there's the authentic slave girl jewelry and ankle bracelets so that their torsos can twinkle as their tummies tinkle to recorded Persian pop music.

Wuanita has done some research and tells us that bellydancing was done in the harems to please their husbands (sic) and it's nice to think that occidental ladies with ordinary run-of-the-mill midriffs, after completing her course, will return to their husbands as authentic houris from a Mohammedan paradise. These husbands at coffee break the next morning can then boast to their less fortunate male friends, that they have 'belles that jingle jangle jingle.'

I see a vision of the Millenium here; husband watching television and being entertained at the commercial break by wives wearing nothing but some kitchen gauze, junk beads, and ankle bracelets, practicing the Iraqi Rag or the Turkish Delight.

For these women, who in their secret psyches have wished to be swept away by a romantic Bedouin chief on a white stallion, bellydancing is not just an exotic exercise, it is a passport to a desert harem with tinkling bells, slave bracelets and gossamer see-thrus; it is a heavenly paean to delicious, if sandy, seduction by an Arab shiek who looks like Rudolph Valentino; or it is simply the seven year itch.

So how about it, Carmel Recreation Department, and hire me to teach a class of men bellydancing (Grandfathers cordially invited). I mean if Monterey can do its own thing, so can we. We'll wear leopard loin cloths, ivory rings on our noses, libidinous tattoos on our posteriors and navels, which will suggestively undulate as we dance, and we'll learn to shimmy like a Watusi.

'Futures Fair' planned at MPC

Peninsula residents will have the opportunity to "look into the future" as the Monterey Peninsula College Community Services Office presents a day-long "Futures Fair" on Saturday, May 17, from 9:30 to 4 p.m. on the MPC campus.

According to Heinz Hubler, MPC's Community Services officer, two Friday evening programs will kick off Saturday's events. Starting at 6 p.m. Friday in Lecture Forum 103, a two-hour Videosynthesis Workshop will be featured where participants may see and learn about experiments in the use of television as an artistic medium.

Following the workshop, Dr. Walter Strode, a urologist and partner of the Straub Clinic-Hospital in Honolulu, will be final guest speaker in MPC's futures forum "In Touch with Tomorrow," and will present his lecture at 8 p.m. in Lecture Forum 103.

Admission to the Videosynthesis Workshop is free and admission to the Strode lecture is $1.

Hubler said the event is planned for "the entire family." Maps and more information on the exhibits and lecture locations will be available at the main campus entrance and at the MPC Student Center, where most of the exhibits will be located.

Admission to the "Futures Fair" is free. For further information, contact the MPC Community Services Office at 373-5522.

By PAUL SIDONE

Bellydancing or— The Seven year Itch

In case you think that this idea is totally male chauvinistic, we would, of course, observe the proprieties. For example, if Wuanita keeps her more portly and courtly houris suitably veiled, we'll restrict the tattoos on our senior citizens to a picture of Washington crossing the Delaware.

In this permissive age, where sex, not love, is all and doing your own thing is practically a constitutional right, how can the Carmel City Fathers refuse me?

I mean to say about a third of our acquaintances are uncoupled or uncoupling. Families are disintegrating. When they visit us by halves, we sterilize the cocktails afterwards. It's a virus, I think. Soon we'll have to wear gauze masks.

Friends drop in to see us and tell us that they are splitting as they head for the lawyer's office. Usually they leave the motor running outside.

However bellydancing for all will reverse this nuclear trend. The family that 'TWISTS' together, 'EXISTS' together.

Bellydancing could sweep the Peninsula like backgammon or transcendental meditation. Classes would spread like wildfire and soon everybody would be bumping and grinding to the beat of a distant Islamic drum. Carried to excess, it could cause a national belly ache.

To mark the graduation of our respective students, Wuanita and I could perhaps combine our classes for an elaborate ceremony of abdominal agitation.

The music would be supplied by a Tunisian Trio on zither, on drums, and on drugs. It would be an orgiastic celebration that would beat anything that Essalen or Encounter Therapy Groups could put on - a veritable holocaust of sagging bosoms, bellies and buttocks. Not quite what Billy Graham has in mind for us but nearer to what Dante had in mind when he visualized the 'Inferno.'

The only justification I can see for their turning me down is, that the geological vibrations set up by the explosion population of mass bellies dancing might cause a seismic tremor to break off the Monterey Peninsula and topple it into the Pacific.

So I trust that the Carmel Recreation Department will not be discriminatory. If Monterey can distribute gold coins to bring back burlesque so that grandmothers can bellydance like slave girls in a Persian Market, then Carmel can distribute largess so that grandfathers can do their sexagenarian shimmy and not be found 'wanton.'

REMEMBER WHEN?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone
May 30, 1925

Carmel's sewer affairs, which have been given so much publicity lately, are in reality no problem at all.

The situation was cleared up last Monday night when the city board of trustees passed a resolution ordering the Street Superintendent, August Englund, to grant permits for sewer connections, providing the sewer contractor would waive all responsibility on the party of the city.

The action followed a report by City Attorney Argyll Campbell, who appeared before the State Board of Health in San Francisco last Saturday to seek means of solving the sewer question.

Campbell declared that in an interview with the president of the board of health, he learned that the health board had nothing to do with preventing connections to the sanitary sewer, and Carmel's permit to operate a sanitary sewer had not been revoked, and that the board of health could take no action.

Seats go on sale today for the second year of the Carmel Follies. The show dates are Friday, June 12, and Saturday, June 13, at the Theatre of the Golden Bough. Tickets for both performances can be obtained at the shop of the Carmel Weavers in the Court of the Golden Bough.

Entries are now being made for the annual dog show of the Del Monte Kennel Club to be held at the Hotel Del Monte June 6 and 7.

Whippet racing Sunday afternoon on the polo field, and police dog trials on the hotel grounds Saturday afternoon are to be interesting features of the show.

Pine Inn, the new La Playa, and Highlands Inn are filled to capacity this weekend. Memorial Day, falling on Saturday, affords a fine opportunity for a week-end jaunt, which city people are taking advantage of.

25 YEARS AGO:

Robert (Casey at the Bat) Doer was elected a member of the San Jose City Council last Monday. The Pine Cone learned today.

Doer was an exceedingly popular teacher at Sunset school preceding his service overseas during the war. His rendition of Casey at the Bat had so fascinated his Seventh Grade at Sunset that when he returned from overseas on furlough he was required to give a full reading of the classic, with gestures, to his Sunset Alumni, then well on their way through Carmel High School. They are now half way through Cal and Stanford, Vassar, -a dozen other colleges--and doing him credit.

Consternation! Some 400 dwellers on the Point, out at Lobos and the Highlands, in Hatton Fields, Carmel Woods and Jack's Peak found a little notice in their R.F.D. mailboxes one fine morning last week, informing them that their box number had been changed.

This week it's operation paint brush as the astonished box holders sally forth to paint out the old and brush in the new number.

It's operation stencil at the Pine Cone, and such a whopping job that if all of you don't find your new number on this issue be patient.

This week, authorized by the board of directors of the Monterey Bay Girl Scout Council, Mrs. Lee Chamberlain, the council's executive director for the Monterey Peninsula, asked Granite Construction Company to demolish what remains of the Carmel Girl Scout House following a fire on May 1, 1963.

Since this time, the unusable facility has been declared a hazard by the Carmel city council. As a result of the hazardous condition of the Girl Scout House, the council passed an ordinance requiring that such unusable buildings be demolished and not left as a danger and eyesore to the community.

Fleet Mercury sailboats of the Stillwater Yacht Club will once again be seen skimming across the bay on Sunday, when two races signal the start of the sailing season at Stillwater Cove in Pebble Beach. The races, one at 11 a.m. and another 2:30 p.m., will be the first two of the 12 race Championship series.

Representatives of a number of Monterey Peninsula cultural organizations met at the home of Leonard Klene in Carmel Highlands on Monday evening to discuss the possibility of coordinating their efforts toward the realization of a cultural center to provide suitable housing for the activities of the various groups represented.

At its May 13 meeting, the Carmel Arts Commission heard its chairman, Mrs. Barbara Norberg, propose that a surplus two-bedroom house from Fort Ord be purchased and moved to the southeast corner of the city owned Forest Theatre property. Mrs. Norberg said the structure would be used as a home for an artist-in-residence who could also serve as the theatre's custodian and caretaker.

For many years the Redken name has been synonymous with the finest professional hair and skin care products.

From the very beginning, what really made Redken products so outstanding in a sea of virtually thousands of other beauty products, was the advanced research and technology that led to their formulations.

The hair, skin and scalp are naturally mildly acidic. This is measured in a laboratory by "pH." Scientists use the convenient pH scale of 0-14 to determine acidity or alkalinity. 0 being extreme acidity and 14 being extreme alkalinity.

The hair and skin's natural pH registers from 4.5 to 5.5. Ordinary complexion soaps, including those with cold cream, often register an alkaline pH of 8.2 to 10. So, too, do many lotions, beauty creams and hair preparations. All of these alkaline products are incompatible with Nature's normal acidic state.

Many people throughout the country are already devoted to Redken's line of acid balances, organic protein products. So influential has been the scientific approach to beauty that today the Redken name stands as a hallmark of product superiority and technological advancement.

It is imperative that before you purchase any of Redken's products formulated for salon retail, you first consult your Redken hair stylist as to the correct products and direction for use so as to meet your specific beauty requirements. For without a professional hair and skin analysis prior to retail product selection, best results cannot be guaranteed or expected.

Call before June 1 for your free analysis.

Padres lose, but stay in first place

By DOUG THOMPSON

After the Carmel High Padres varsity baseball team crushed Pacific Grove on Tuesday, April 29, they enjoyed first place all to themselves. But a very typical disease hit the Padres, and its name was Gonzales. Once again, as has happened so very often, the Spartans from Gonzales frustrated the Padres to no end.

This time the game was baseball, but when Gonzales plays Carmel, it really doesn't matter what sport it is — the Spartans always seem to come through. Gonzales triumphed 5-2, and knocked the Padres back into a first-place tie with Pacific Grove.

Let's talk about the good news of the week first. Carmel rallied for ten runs in the bottom of the fourth inning, and that propelled the Padres past PG 14-4. Joe Gimbel, Bob Egli, Jeff Vandervort and Dave Hare all collected two hits each to lead the 13-hit onslaught. Gimbel's hits included a solo home run and a two-run single in the fourth. Egli knocked in three runs to help the cause and "super-sub" Guy DuBets contributed a pinch hit single that drove two runs across in the big inning. In that inning, Carmel sent 14 men to the plate, amassed ten runs, seven hits, four walks, and PG helped out with three errors.

Egli continued his brilliant pitching for the Padres, pitching a complete game, allowing only five hits and three walks. The big righthander surrendered four runs, all of which were unearned, and blew a third strike past seven of the Breaker batters.

Carmel was then 5-1 in the league, ahead of Hollister (5-2) and Pacific Grove (4-2).

On Friday, May 2, Hollister was scheduled to play at Pacific Grove and Carmel was slated to play at Gonzales. Well, we all know what happened at Gonzales, but at PG the Breakers received a fine pitching performance from David Knight and defeated Hollister 11-4.

Gonzales limited the Padre bats to just one hit and won 5-2. Thanks to a wild streak by Spartan hurler Doug Arneson, the Padres managed two runs, but Dan Carrillo relieved Arneson and proceeded to mow Carmel down in his three and two thirds innings of work.

An old Padre nemesis which hasn't bothered them for quite some time came back to haunt them in Gonzales. Three very key errors by Carmel enabled Gonzales to build a lead that proved to be enough.

The Padres loss combined with a Breaker victory moved both teams into a first place tie with 5-2 records.

Meanwhile the Carmel JV's split their games but differently from the Varsity. The JV's lost to PG but defeated Gonzales. A five-run last inning was not quite enough for Carmel as they fell to PG 8-6. Greg Miller collected three hits to pace the Padres. Against Gonzales, a fine pitching performance by Bruce Crane lifted Carmel past the Spartans 5-2. The victory raised the Padres record to 5-2.

The Carmel freshmen lost two games on Saturday, May 3 to Hollister, 7-1 and 8-4. The double loss dropped their record to 10-4, but they are still in first place.

On Tuesday, May 6, the Padre Varsity upped its league record to 6-2 by defeating Marello Prep 8-1 in a game played at Carmel.

Jeff Vandervort ripped his second home run of the season to lead the hitters and Stuart Ross raised his record to 2-0 with five fine innings of pitching. Bob Egli and Joey Gimbel are both leading the Padre parade of hitting with better than .500 averages.

Meanwhile, Pacific Grove, Hollister and Gonzales all lost last week enabling the Padres to latch onto first place by themselves again. Now, let's hope they keep it that way. Their next game is tomorrow at home against King City at 4 pm.

One hour later Huu picked the family up and took them to his American friend's home where they were issued documents to board the plane, as well as immigration papers. The family left their houses as well as two automobiles parked on the street and ran for the plane.

They missed the first plane, and somewhere between the first and second plane, a brother and sister got lost and never made it. Brother Huu, who managed to get the rest of the family aboard the plane, stayed behind. and sister got lost and never made it. Brother Huu, who managed to get the rest of the family aboard the plane, stayed behind.

(On Mother's Day word got through to the family that Huu, as well as the other son and daughter arrived safely on Guam and are on their way to Pendleton.)

Bob and Patty Burris have taken it upon themselves to care for the family until they can make it on their own. The Burris are perfect hosts, perhaps because of their previous association with people of Southeast Asia. Before retiring and opening their business in Carmel, Bob was with the Navy and his family was stationed on Guam for several years.

But others in Carmel are not giving the refugees quite as big a welcome.

Pauline Stanley, who is on the board of Monterey Peninsula College and a friend of the Burris', has become involved in gathering clothes as well as finding homes for the refugees arriving on the Peninsula.

"We're encountering a lot of negative feeling about this. I've bumped into so many Carmel people who say they don't want anything to do with the Vietnamese at all.

"There are many reasons for this negative attitude. I can understand that Americans are tired of giving and then being told they're bad, they're ugly.

"But despite the politics, standing in front of us at the doorstep of our town are people who have no shoes, who are hungry and cold. That's what's before us now."

Both she and the Burris are concerned that the influx of Vietnamese will take employment that is scarce enough for out-of-work, tax paying Americans.

Patty Burris insists this need not be the case, however.

"They're willing to do anything at all. They don't want welfare and I don't want it for them. They can make it without food stamps as well."

Already, through the Burris' efforts the men have an assortment of odd jobs.

Lon works as a janitor at the Carmel Plaza mornings. Mai is working as a busboy at the Highlands Inn, eight hours a day, six days a week. He also does yard work and gardening for the Wayfarer Inn, and washes dishes at Shabu-Shabu.

The grandfather does yard work but is eager to find a job as a busboy. Eventually, after he learns English and something about American culture and business, he would like to open a Vietnamese restaurant. Cooking has always been a hobby.

But the primary problem before them now is housing. They realize that they will never be able to find a house in which they can all live. The two younger couples are looking for positions as live-in help or are willing to pay a small rent, while fixing up a home.

Unfortunately, situations such as this often foster exploitation. Mrs. Burris reports that two people have already called "looking for indentured servants."

"One woman said she'd learning French again and they're all enjoying fine French-Vietnamese cuisine.

"You know, if every little community could just take in ten of these refugees we'd run out before we got to Reno," said Mrs. Burris.

THE HOANG FAMILY was living in one room at Asilomar until the Burrises of Carmel invited them to stay at their home. The two wives, Hoa and Cuc are shown here preparing dinner in the Burris kitchen while children Luan and Loan look skeptical about having a picture taken.

take a Vietnamese who would be willing to work six and half days a week for room, board and sixteen dollars a week."

But the family remains in good spirits. Carmel residents may have noticed Mr. Hoang leading his family down Ladera Road, along Rio Road to Mass at the Mission the past two Sundays. According to Mrs. Burris they are devoted to their religion and the entire family spends one hour in prayer each evening.

The Burrises equally enjoy their guests. Bob is capita within the city," said Councilman Gunnar Norberg in reference to the combined city and county tax rate of 33.9 cents per $100 of assessed property value. His comment that the county tax rate, which was raised from 9.7 cents in 1973-1974 to 16.2 cents in 1974-1975, may be increased again next year was not contested by the county officials present in council chambers.

During its tour of inspection preceding Tuesday's meeting, the council resolved, at least temporarily, another hotly disputed issue involving the operation of a Carmel public facility. It voted to extend the rent-free lease of the Carmel Police Youth Athletic Association on the small gymnasium in the basement of Sunset Center for one year.

Touch For Health Demonstration

A one hour introduction and demonstration of "Touch For Healing" will be given free of charge at the Northern California Savings and Loan, Thursday February 27th, at 8:00 p.m. "Touch For Health" is the topic for a growing number of people learning to help themselves relieve pain and tension and anxiety through natural methods.

The basis for treatment is the testing and integrating of muscles into a coordinated balanced functional unit.

The demonstration will show how muscles are tested then treated, using reflex massage points on the torso, holding points on the skull and acupuncture meridian tracing along the Chinese "channels of energy" in the body.

The object for "Touch of Health" is to provide the lay person with a means to test and help himself and his family when minor problems arise. "Touch For Health" techniques are particularly helpful in cases of tension, anxiety, neuritis, neuralgia, incoordination, skeletal difficulties, and a host of pain syndromes. Although these problems show some of the best responses when treated with these methods, it has been shown that the whole body can benefit from "Touch For Health" techniques.

This will be the second in a series of introduction demonstrations on "Touch for Health." The long term objective is to provide the entire community with a means to help themselves without an immediate run to the doctor and without reliance on aspirins, pain killers, and relaxants.

All the members of the community are invited to attend the demonstration Thursday, May 22nd, at 8:00 p.m. There is no charge and there is no obligation to learn "Touch of Health."

Local MS fundraising drive begins

The Multiple Sclerosis Society will begin to recruit volunteers in Monterey with the help of Mrs. Patricia Bowen, who was named Monterey Peninsula MS Society's Mother of the Year, in honor of Mother's Day and to begin the 1975 Multiple Sclerosis Society Annual fund raising drive.

"We have a fulltime office in Salinas, but we need somebody in Monterey to spark the Volunteers in Multiple Sclerosis (VIMS) drive here. Even though the Salinas Chapter was just started two years ago, it has expanded to the point of starting a chapter in this area. We will be soliciting funds and volunteers this month in this area and hope to have enough volunteers to eventually open an office here," Mrs. Bowen stated.

The Greater Monterey Bay Area Multiple Sclerosis Society Chapter, covering Santa Cruz, San Benito and Monterey Counties, supplies information on Multiple Sclerosis from its Salinas Chapter, handles literature on what to expect with MS, advises people on where to go and what agencies are available for further help. "It's a devastating disease of young people 20-40 years old, and it needs the help of the community. The main problem is that most MS patients are hidden from the world, except by their families, so they end up isolated. We need to start activating the patients, but we also need to know how many there are," Mrs. Bowen said.

"We hope to recruit enough volunteers in this area to help transport those with MS to where they need to go, to help their families make it without breaking up, because it can be very hard on them," she added.

VIMS was launched two years ago, with a fashion show at the Monterey Airport and many fund-raising drives have been kicked-off since then to benefit local

Groom's delight

By Phyllis Jersey

With this year's season of summer weddings about to get into full swing, let us think about a novel idea: a groom's cake to dream on instead of a bride's. Here is a minuet for a pre-Groom's Supper:

Pink Lady
Red Caviar and Cream Cheese
Shrimp Vol au Vent
or
Imperial Crab Supreme
Wild Rice in Consomme
Groom's Cake
Champagne or What Have You

Pink Lady: Half gin, 1-3 fresh lime juice, 1-3 apple juice, 2 quick dashes grenadine. Shake well with cracked ice, strain.

Aperitif: One small jar red caviar, 1 medium cream cheese. Mix lightly. Put into center of best platter. Surround with crackers and spreaders. For each his/her own.

Shrimp Vol au Vent
(Serves 6)

Make medium-sized patty shells or use bakery-bought ones, these come frozen also and only need defrosting then warmed. The shrimp can be cooked well ahead then refrigerated. For a super supper simmer shrimp for 5 minutes, cool in bouillon adding a slight dash of Accent. Shell and devein them. Drain 1 large can broiled-in-butter mushroom crowns saving juice. Melt 1-3 cup butter adding some minced instant onion, cooking 5 minutes over low heat. Blend in 1-3 cup flour, salt, pepper, nutmeg to taste. Combine 1 cup each, milk and light cream, liquid from mushrooms;

2-story proposal draws complaints

Hotly disputed plans for a residential development facing on the Carmel city beach will highlight the agenda of the Central Regional Commission of the California Coastal Commission on May 19 in Santa Cruz.

Plans have been accepted by the city planning department for a two-story beach front home roughly 150 feet south of the turnaround at the foot of Ocean Avenue. Submitted by Don Sheldon, the vice president of Hudelson and Myers, Inc., the plans call for a 2,300 square foot structure on a 40 by 100 foot building site which would be just under the city's height limitation of 24 feet.

Pointing out that there are only two two-story structures on the beach front from Ocean Avenue south to the city limits, he stated "those unfortunately were put in a long time ago, but it doesn't mean they are right for the Carmel beach."

Home owners directly east of the building site and south on Scenic Avenue have announced that they will attend the coastal commission hearing to protest the planned development as "obtrusive and a dominating structure inappropriate to the Carmel beach front."

Francis Small, one of the home owners who will express objections at the meeting in Santa Cruz, stated this week that he and other property owners are "trying to protect the appearance of the shoreline."

add all at once. Cook and stir in double boiler until smooth and thickened. Beat one egg yolk slightly, with some of hot sauce returning to double boiler. Mix well cooking briefly. Add shrimp, mushrooms, sherry. Serve in heated patty shells. The beauty about this dish is that it can be made ahead, reheated just before spooning into shells. Great for a wedding reception also. For the groom's cake, bake or buy a spice and fruit cake, refrigerate so that it will be easy to slice into rather thick squares which wrap in decorated foil. Tie with colored cord, adding a long stemmed cherry or strawberry on top. Rather original.

Imperial Crab Supreme

For 2 cans undiluted cream of celery soup, add 2 cans best crab. Season with paprika, dry mustard, taste for salt and pepper remembering the soup is salty. It should be diluted with milk but do not have it soupy. A small amount of mayonnaise takes care of this nicely. Heat in chafing dish with small buttered baking powder biscuits as containers. A separate heat-proof dish of wild rice cooked in diluted consomme is a splendid addition.

It is an axiom that the way to a man's heart is through his appetite. To make sure that he doesn't miss the point, once you have captured him, suggest he celebrate his loss of liberty with the above recipes which you will, as his bride, prepare for him. After returning from your wedding trip why not surprise him with this realistic he-man repast.

Fashion benefits BSI

STORY AND PHOTOS BY JOAN MEDFORD

Bright sunshine, a soft breeze, tables in the shade of oak trees and haute couture set the scene for the Behavioral Sciences Institute benefit luncheon and fashion show at Del Monte Center, Saturday, May 10.

Michael McCarron, manager of Saks Fifth Ave., hosted the event and Suzanne Gruendel introduced Lilli Haines, who narrated the show. Ms. Haines is the U.S. representative for Christian Dior, and was here at the behest of Marc Bohan, now designer for Dior.

An elegant box lunch was served and included shocking pink sandwiches from the Mediterranean. Models were the ladies of the B.S.I. Auxiliary. The designers represented in the colorful show were Trigere, Teal Traina, Christian Dior, Adele Simpson, Sibley-Coffee, Oscar de la Renta, Geoffrey Beene, Bill Blass, Scott Barrie and John Anthony.

Mrs. Richard Ghent arranged for a drawing, which included dinners at the Clock Garden Restaurant, Wills Fargo and the Barrel House. Saks donated a Dior handbag and a picnic hamper. A Schilling Spice rack and ten car wash-wax jobs also were won. The Institute realized $275, which is to go to the scholarship fund for speech, hearing and language problems for needy children and adults.

League of Women Voters

Research—action—politics

"I joined because I wanted to be an individual, not just somebody's mother or somebody's wife. The League allows a woman to speak up, to form her own opinions, to develop her self-confidence, and generally establish herself as an individual."

"I joined for two reasons: One, to educate myself, and two, to meet interesting people."

"I was politically active in L.A. before moving up here. I was very impressed with the League's level of political sophistication."

By CHRIS KELLER

Since 1919 when the organization lobbied for such things as pure milk legislation, to the present two-year project on land use, the League of Women Voters of California has remained non-partisan, informative, and politically effective at national, state and local levels of government.

Here on the Monterey Peninsula the organization includes over 100 women dedicated to League principles: to encourage people to take an active interest in government and to demonstrate that the informed citizen can influence what happens to government and the way in which it happens.

Recently six local women attended the biannual state convention with 400 delegates from 82 other California leagues. They are Janice O'Brien (president of Monterey League) and Geraldine Houston of Pebble Beach, Janice Elster and Janet Morris of Monterey, Linda Bradley of Carmel, and Peggy Arnold of Carmel Valley.

They gathered at Janice O'Brien's home two weeks ago to discuss the convention as well as the role of the League on the Monterey Peninsula.

Each of the delegates performs different functions in the League, and the League is organized in such a way that a member may devote as much or as little time as she wishes. And there are a number of areas in which to involve oneself.

VOTERS SERVICE

The women broke League activities down into three basic categories: Voter Service, Study, and Action.

"People around here don't realize how powerful they are by virtue of the fact there are so many elections," explained Linda Bradley, who is chairman of voters service in the Monterey League.

She is responsible for disseminating voter information on four city council elections, elections for parks and recreation board members, the school boards, the airport board and a myriad collection of other civic elections.

Whenever possible the League arranges "candidates' nights" so that the public can meet with all the candidates for a particular office, ask questions and hear their answers. In addition, the League publishes a pamphlet, "Facts for Voters," which is distributed free of charge.

Another vital function of the voters service is registering residents so they can vote. Linda herself registered 500 voters in the past year.

She feels that voter registration is a very important League function because of the League's reputation for non-partisan reputation.

"It used to be that the two parties would always set up registration tables prior to an election. But people were often intimidated about registering Democratic if they were at a Republican table, or vice-versa," Linda.

STUDY

The second area of League activity is study.

"We choose to study any area that would lend itself to governmental action. We try to look into things other groups are not looking into. The issue should be one that is long range enough for the League to study in depth," explained one woman.

This year the local League has chosen to take on a study of transportation on the Monterey Peninsula and "how it affects people economically, socially, and environmentally," explained Janice O'Brien.

In the past they have studied and continue to study housing problems, development, and administration of justice.

Geraldine Houston, a past president of the League, explained that the latter particularly interested her.

"The first study I did was a two-year state study on the administration of justice. This meant talking to area judges, district attorneys, public defenders, lawyers at all levels," she said.

The study also included a study of the jail situation in Monterey County, as well as a local probation study. Then the League arranged for the public to visit the jail itself.

More League of Women

Mrs. Houston has found her League experience invaluable for other civic organizations to which she belongs.

All League study begins at the "unit" meeting. Units meet in Carmel, Pebble Beach, Carmel Valley and other communities around the peninsula. Peggy Arnold is chairman of the Carmel Valley unit.

Her job is to attend a briefing by the particular local committee working on the issue which the units will discuss at their monthly meetings. She then leads the discussion among the 10 or 20 women who meet at the home of the hostess.

"Usually most of the women have read something on the topic and have some ideas of their own to contribute. Often it's material that has been presented at meetings before, and of course the Bulletin (which League members receive monthly) carries a good deal of information on the topic at hand," she explained.

Mrs. Arnold feels she has a large and lively unit because so many people in the valley are concerned with development, a common topic for discussion.

The unit meetings are a good starting place for women who have never belonged to this type of organization and are a little afraid to express themselves in front of a group.

"It's easy to be overwhelmed at the monthly League meetings without the experience of unit meetings and study groups," explained one member. "Self-confidence usually develops in the small units."

As with land use, the individual members study the topic in a series of unit meetings and at the end come to a consensus on aspects of the issue. Unit decisions are passed on to the local League board for local action, or passed on to the state or national board for further action.

A national statement of position on land use has just recently been formulated which reflects the opinions of League members in every unit in California and across the country.

Among other things, the national League recommends that the "federal government exert leadership to:

--encourage formulation of land resource goals;

--develop policies and standards for conserving land resources;

--foster coordinated planning and management of land resources by all levels of government;

--foster cooperation among agencies and among levels of government in establishing mechanisms that ensure consideration of all public and private rights and interests affected by land-use decisions;

--minimize conflict of interest on the part of those who make decisions about land resources;

--and ensure more effective citizen participation through such measures as adequate funding for citizen information and review."

ACTION

Action, of course is the end goal, either at a local, state, or national level. The League's action, whether it be issuance of an informative pamphlet, testimony on behalf of the League at a public hearing, or even a march on city hall, is usually effective because it is an informed opinion and has the support of its members.

It was Senator Mansfield who, when he heard national membership figures for the League, was dumbfounded and said, "Is that all? I thought there were millions of you ladies."

In the past, League statements have been read in the state legislature as well as Congress.

The League has earned a good reputation and thus has a great deal of political "clout," a word that means a lot to these dedicated women who often devote many hours a week to the careful study that backs any position they take.

It is this clout that makes all legislators listen to the League whether in Monterey, Sacramento or Washington D.C.

Delegates reported that the state convention in Pasadena was a good example of the way in which the League operates. One delegate was impressed by the "strict adherence to parliamentary procedure," another by the "democratic way in which the three-day convention was handled."

Assessment practices and role of property taxes in California is the topic the delegates chose for a two-year study throughout the state.

Today the League is happy to welcome anyone, male or female, interested in joining the organization. Dues are $12 a year and a member is free to devote as much time as she, or he, wishes.

One delegate remarked that unlike other social groups "there are no cliques in the League."

A profile of the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula shows that the average member is between thirty and thirty-nine years of age, has her BA or BS, and generally votes Democratic.

However, a slightly smaller percentage have either a junior college degree or have done post-graduate work, and there are as many over age 70 as under age 30.

The majority do not work and are married.

Unfortunately, Mrs. O'Brien notes that the League has lost several of its best members recently who decided either to go back to school or take jobs.

But for women who do devote several years to the League, Geraldine Houston maintains it is a "fantastic training program for women who want to get into political and civic affairs."

A MAGNIFICENT ESTATE NEAR THE BEACH
Never have we more aptly said, "Must be seen to be appreciated!" The property consists of the whole of Carmel's Block 147, which runs between Camino Real and Casanova — Santa Lucia and Frasier. It's a beautiful adobe home, built by Hugh Constock for its owner in 1937; quality, not price, was the objective. The home has 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, double garage. Living room is 18' x 32'; master bedroom is 15' x 29'. The garden is terrific. Well worth the price of $185,000. But as we said before, you just have to SEE it.

2 BDRMS & GUEST HOUSE — $69,950
ON A CORNER ON TWO LOTS. The land alone is almost worth the full price. The house is a charmer, with much wood paneling and natural redwood, exposed-beam ceilings. The guest house is not exceptional but could be with a little work. The garden is well-planted. The whole property offers great privacy and seclusion. It's in Carmel Woods, just outside the City Limits.

3 BDRMS, SOUTH OF OCEAN, $65,000
This is EXCELLENT value in a low-priced home. It has 2 baths, a family room, and a large dining area off the living room. The home is on two levels, has lots of wood paneling, and has a very beautiful outlook. It should sell quickly, so call for an appointment now.

A SUPERIOR 1-BR, BEAUTIFUL SETTING
The garden is almost like a private park, with 12 magnificent oaks and outstanding landscaping. This is not a cute little cottage but a well-built, beautifully-maintained home on a 60' x 110' lot. There's some fine wood paneling in the living room, a separate dining room, a laundry, and a garage door opener. All this for $78,000.

2 BRS, 2 BATHS NEAR TOWN, $67,500
This attractive, 8-year old home is on a quiet street, South of Ocean Ave., less than 4 blocks from town. It has a beamed-ceiling living room, a good-sized dining room, kitchen with built-ins, large rumpus room, and plenty of storage. Full price is just $67,500.

Lines from Lois

Let a View be Part of your Life

"...And frosts are slain
and flowers begotten,

And in green underwood and cover,
Blossom by blossom the spring begins."
You would not have the slightest doubt that spring had come, nor any lingering question that the world would renew itself, if you lived with a view like this from every window and saw the flowers on the greening hills in springtime.

On a mid-valley hill, we offer a nearly new home with 4 bedrooms and a great family room, lovingly landscaped and developed for family activities. Very convenient to Mid-Valley shopping and a very short walk to the school bus. The 4th bedroom and bath, as well as the family room, are on a lower level, with separate entrance, and there is a beautiful spot for a pool you may want to add later. Decks surround, and the view from each is spectacular.

So many nice features in the interior, from utilitarian items like a central vac. system and a laundry chute, to niceties, such as the lovely carpeting, beam ceilings, three full baths, and the clean, spacious feeling in all the rooms. Altogether, approximately 2550 sq. feet of wonderful family living, and there's a double detached garage. The price is $97,000 and maximum financing is easily arranged. May we show YOU?

Approximately 200 Episcopal women attended a special morning Communion service celebrated by the Rt. Rev. G. Richard Millard, Suffragan Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northern California.

Following luncheon, the Rev. Robin Merrill of the Urban Indian Ministry, spoke about his work with native Americans in the San Francisco area.

This event was coordinated by Mrs. James Cline, U.T.O. Chairman, Mrs. Robert W. Priestley, Jr., E.C.W. President and Father Charles Stacy, Assistant Rector of All Saints'.

Mission tract art gallery County denies permit for

The Monterey County Zoning Administrator has denied an application by George Bleich of the Mission tract area of Carmel for an art gallery in his home. The application was denied at a meeting in Salinas on the grounds that it would represent an introduction of a commercial use into a residential zone.

ARTISTS PARTICIPATING IN last week's "Artists in Action" program sponsored by the Carmel Business Association included Luis Antonio, driftwood sculptor; and Phil Godwin, burlwood tables.

Bleich's property is located on 16th Avenue, in a single family residential district which allows art galleries only with the issuance of a use permit. A commercial artist, he has had his studio in his home and requested county approval for public showings of his work in his home.

Prior to the decision in Salinas, the application was the subject of considerable controversy among residents of the Mission Tract area. More than 40 letters were received by the County Zoning Administrator's office expressing opposition to the application and a petition protesting the proposed use of residential property was signed by 33 neighborhood residents.

Meeting on May 6 in Santa Cruz, the commission agreed to schedule a hearing on Bleich's appeal of the decision at 2 p.m. on June 3.

Carmel Crafts

Celebrates 20 years

The Carmel Craft Studios celebrated twenty years at their location on San Carlos last week.

A number of the shops that were established in 1955 still remain under the original ownership. Mrs. Wood's Studio Seven, John Calder's glassblowing shop, and Mrs. Bell's gallery are three of the ten businesses presently in the center that have celebrated twenty years at the same location.

Formerly a sheet metal shop, the center was established to provide reasonably priced studios for artists and craftsmen in the area.

"We provide moral and physical support for each other," explained Fred Klepich, general manager of the center and one of its early founders. Klepich's Studio Art Supplies is also one of the original studios.
